Wear Your Rubbers.
Two Bombs, Far Apart.
'Alice' Pays Visit.
Few Resist Death.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

PRESIDENT HOOVER and Gov. Roosevelt, who may be competitors next November, had a very pleasant talk when the President invited 22 Governors to dine with him at the White House.

If a friend leaves Mr. Solly Wertheim owing him money, Mr. Wertheim always says:

"Don't forget to wear your rubbers."

President Hoover probably did not advise Gov. Roosevelt to wear his rubbers, but no doubt Gov. Roosevelt would be the President's favorite competitor at the coming election. Those who understand politics, and former Gov. Smith's friends all know why.

Two bombs attracted attention yesterday. One in Shanghai, thrown at a parade in honor of the Japanese Emperor's birthday. Some Chinese thought the parade was being held in the wrong city.

The other bomb, verbal, was thrown by Bishop Manning of New York at Gov. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for President. Bishop Manning wants to know why Gov. Roosevelt does nothing about corruption in the government of New York City."

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of Prof. Dodgson, who wrote "Alice in Wonderland" and signed it "Lewis Carroll," thinking it too undignified for a professor of mathematics.

Sometimes undignified things are more important than others.

The learned Dodgson will be remembered for his "Alice," not for his books on Euclid.

Mrs. Hargreaves, the original "little Alice" for whom the book was written, now 80 years old, comes to celebrate the anniversary of one who made her famous.

DR. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, learned head of the university, will address and congratulate Mrs. Hargreaves.

He might speculate on the strange things that she will see when she goes "through the looking glass" into that greater "wonderland" on the other side of the grave. What kings and queens will she find there, what arrangements that will seem topsy turvy to her?

IN EDDYVILLE, KY., authorities were prepared to kill three Negroes in the usual easy, peaceful way. Two of the condemned accepted their fate peacefully, but Walter Holmes decided that life was worth fighting for. It took the officers an hour and a half to force him from his death cell to the electric chair.

He stabbed one, beat others with an iron pipe, and tear gas was needed to subdue him. He finally walked to his death smoking a cigaret.

THIS IS news because it is unusual. Men die usually as quietly as sheep, playing their parts submissively in arrangements that have been made.

This writer has seen two men guillotined in Paris, five hanged in New York City, two killed in the electric chair. No protest or struggle by any.

IN OLD days, when Britain wanted to impress and suppress barbarous tribes of the Khyber Pass, or fuzzy wuzzies anywhere, it was necessary to send men marching over sand and rocks, offering good targets to savages.

Recently, the British have sent armor-clad tanks, impervious to all savage devices, and airplanes, dropping bombs that frighten with their noise; tear gas that terrifies with its strangeness and when necessary, machine gun bullets.

SOMETHING WORSE has been devised, the "voice from the sky," an apparatus in an airplane that will multiply the human voice three million times.

It will talk and roar in the language of the barbarians that are to be frightened, warning, exhorting, and you can imagine how it will impress them.

The voice from the sky might even speak Arabic and pretend to come from Mohammed himself.

THE LOST Atlantis, or something as good, may come back, thanks to volcanic disturbances in South America.

Prof. Ugo Mondello, a learned Italian geogolist, says new land, perhaps an island continent as big as Australia, will rise in the South Pacific.

The coast of South America is rising, as are the submerged banks of the Atlantic, due to constant internal pressure.

This is good news for future generations. Too much of the earth is now covered with water. We do not need so much. It is all in the hands of Nature now, but a time may come when science will know how to lift the depressed crust of the earth from the bottom of oceans, adding ten to twenty billions acres of fertile land to man's possessions.

THAT WILL have to be done carefully, to keep land and water balanced. The desert, perhaps, could sop up enough water to make the ocean fit into smaller holes.

Fresh water, as the sun raises it into the clouds, could be poured onto deserts and farms, instead of going back to the oceans. There is enough water in oceans, seas, lakes and rivers to cover the whole earth one mile deep.

Absence of Hirsh Delays Vote Machine Probe

MASSIE VERDICT RIOTS FEARED

AWAIT HIRSH IN MACHINE FEE PROBE

Conick Seeking Attorney's Records to Trace Payment In County Vote Device Deal

Investigation of the records of the Electromatic Vote Machine Company, which acted as sales agent for the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, of Baltimore, in placing Allegheny County's $1,000,000 order for 1,100 voting machines, was delayed today when M. C. Conick, auditor in charge of the Citizens' Committee inquiry, was unable to communicate with H. D. Hirsh, state Public Service Commission attorney and counsel for the Poole Company.

Conick and Ralph H. Frank, assistant county solicitors, aiding in the inquiry, said that Hirsh was to produce the records yesterday, but informed them through a third party that he would be unable to meet them, and Chester Cooke, sales manager of the Electromatic company, would arrive with the records today from Baltimore.

Unable to locate Cooke in town this morning, Conick sought Hirsh.

Conick said that Hirsh's home told him this morning that he had gone to his office, but the auditor was unable to reach him either at his Grant Building or City-County Building headquarters.

Frank was asked if he was going to request the aid of District Attorney Andrew T. Park in the inquiry. He replied:

"I don't propose to hunt him up yet. If he wants me I will be available for a conference at any hour of the day or night."

Conick said Hirsh had agreed to submit for his inspection all the record of the Electromatic Vote Machine Company, including ledgers, cash books, canceled checks and any agreements which may have existed with the Poole company.

TRACE $169,000 FEES

During bankruptcy hearings of the Poole company in Baltimore it was testified the Electromatic company received $169,000 fees for selling Allegheny County more than $1,000,000 voting machines. It is the final disposition of this commission payment the county seeks to determine.

Frank said that Conick probably would be called to Butler next week to testify in Mayor Charles H. Kline's trial, which starts there on Monday, He said:

"If he's needed here, we'll bring him back each night and return him to Butler in time for the opening of court."

In the meantime, plans were going ahead for a conference between County Solicitor J. P. Fife and Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, who is handling the legal phases of the vote machine investigation for the Citizens Committee.

State Senator Frank J. Harris has called another meeting of the senatorial investigating committee, May 9, in Harrisburg to "delve deeply" into the voting machine situation. He said previous meetings had been held with the hope that it would be able eventually to disclose any improper or dishonest methods on the part of public officials, private citizens or any voting machine companies.

HARRIS LINKS PROBES

Harris declared:

"It is the public's right to know these facts and to correlate them with testimony gathered at our earlier hearings, as well as with the developments which have taken place at bankruptcy hearings in Baltimore.

"I am sure we will find that much of the information gathered by the Senate committee will dovetail with new evidence being uncovered. At all events, as chairman of the Senate committee, I feel it is pertinent to call this body of inquiry together now."

GIRL SAYS SHE KILLED KIDNAPER

Troopers Search Highway For Body of 'Victim'; Tells of Struggle in Car

State police today were investigating a story told by Mary Agnes Conlon, 21, of 437 Robinson avenue, Braddock, that she had shot and killed a man who had abducted her last night and drove with her in his automobile to a secluded spot along the William Penn Highway.

Since early today the troopers summoned from the Greensburg barracks, with Miss Conlon as their guide, scoured the William Penn highway east of Wilkinsburg for evidence of the tragedy described by the young woman.

Miss Conlon was quoted by the troopers as saying:

"I shot and killed him with a gun I found in his machine."

The young woman returned to her home after the purported shooting, and summoned her family physician, who in turn, notified the state police.

Rain Halts Pirate-Red Game

The third game of the Pirate-Red series scheduled for this afternoon at Forbes Field was called off at noon on account of rain and wet grounds.

In making the announcement, President William E. Benswanger, of the home club, stated the canceled contest would be played off in Pittsburgh as a part of a doubleheader on Saturday, June 25. The Pirates and Reds will play in Cincinnati tomorrow.

On Monday the Buccos and Cubs will open a series at Forbes Field.

AMERICANS' CONVICTION STIRS HONOLULU; DARROW BITTER

By WILLIAM H. EWING

HONOLULU, April 30.—(AP.)—With a recommendation for leniency, a racially mixed jury has convicted four Americans of manslaughter for the slaying of a Hawaiian.

The jury reported a verdict late yesterday after more than 48 hours' deliberation. The defendants are Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N.; Mrs. Granville Fortescue, society matron, his mother-in-law; Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lord, Navy enlisted men.

The verdict was read in a court room tense with silence. First to break it was a sob from Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of the naval officer, who allegedly was attacked by Joseph Kahahwai, the slain native.

DENIES TROOPERS CALLED

Conviction set all Honolulu astir with excitement and rumors.

Gov. Lawrence M. Judd denied the National Guard has been summoned but said precautions had been taken against possible emergencies. The governor declined to say what this precautionary action had been.

Chief of Police A. F. Weber, who manned the judiciary building with every available policeman while the verdicts were being read, said he had taken no additional precautions other than to have all officers "on their toes."

Although the National Guard was not called out, it was learned from several of its officers they were keeping in touch with each other by telephone so as to be able to go into action should any emergency arise.

It was no secret the Navy element of the population was not only indignant but angry.

OMINOUS CALM

Outwardly the city was quiet last night, but many citizens interpreted this as ominous. The streets were almost deserted and

'MOCKERY—' GIBBONS

Blames Washington for 'Sacrificing' American Womanhood

Floyd Gibbons, famous war correspondent of Universal Service, when informed of the manslaughter verdict in the Fortescue-Massie case early today, made the following comment.

By FLOYD GIBBONS.

(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, April 30.—I am astounded—shocked!

The Fortescue-Massie case verdict is legal mockery.

The figure of justice is that of a woman. Take the scales out of her hand and give her a gun.

Let her call her sons and brothers, her father and her husband to her side. She will need all of them in Hawaii.

Manslaughter—of course it was. And justifiable manslaughter if there ever was justifiable manslaughter.

RAPS POLITICIANS

Our politicians are all lawyers. They write the laws, interpret them, entangle them, invade them and enforce them.

We are overridden by laws and lawyer politicians.

The legal and political mess in Honolulu is the outcome of the legal and political mess in Washington.

Clarence Darrow said it.

Eight months ago the Massie's were a regular, happy American family. Something happened to them. It was not of their doing. They suffered.

And now the very forces that were to have protected the happiness of that American home are pitted against them.

PROTECTION REFUSED

That verdict of conviction is a verdict against every politician in Washington, who, by refusal to kick politics out of Hawaii and place this all-American important defense under the administration of a military commission—by this refusal, negligence, or stupidity, they deprived an innocent American woman of the protection which was her due and they—the Washington politicians—now condemn her husband and her mother and two American men for their efforts to right the wrong that was done to her.

Justice for the fiend who attacked a decent American girl and broke her jaw—justice for his memory, but condemnation for the American husband and the American mother and the American friends who gave him his just deserts.

Washington politicians have sacrificed American womanhood and decency in Hawaii.

The next sacrifice these same politicians will make in Hawaii is the peace and security of the nation unless the political control of an overwhelmingly Asiatic majority is replaced by the complete militarization of all of the islands under a military commission.

Girl Sounds Alarm For Rubbish Blaze

When Miss Adeline Blum, 1223 Sheffield street, saw smoke issuing from the third floor of the Palley Manufacturing Company's plant, 1019 Bidwell street, last night, she ran to Western avenue and Bidwell street and sounded an alarm. Firemen said rubbish ignited. Damage was estimated at $100.

Akron Moors After Second Trip in 2 Days

LAKEHURST, N. J., April 30.—(INS.)—The Navy dirigible Akron returned today to the naval air station here from her second flight in two days. It was secured to its mooring mast to await favorable weather for putting the craft into the hangar.

6 Firemen Burned In New York Blaze

NEW YORK, April 30.—(INS.)—Critically burned in a flaming blast at a factory fire, six firemen today hovered between life and death.

MRS. WHITEMAN LOSES JEWELS

Mrs. Paul Whiteman, wife of the famous orchestra leader, today is seeking the return of a valuable diamond and sapphire studded bar pin, lost during her trips with her husband last evening. She has offered a reward of $100 for the return of the pin. She would not place a value on the jewel.

Mrs. Whiteman said she fastened the pin securely before leaving their William Penn suite for Station KDKA last evening.

From the radio station she went to the Stanley Theater and remained in her husband's dressing room until he concluded his appearance, and then returned with him to the hotel when she noted her loss.

Lindy Hinted Seeking Baby Deal on Yacht

Four of Bond Firm Granted New Trial

William J. Moore, and his three sons, Harold A., Kenneth W. and Charles C., all officers of the American Bond and Mortgage Company, of New York and Chicago, were granted a new trial in Federal Court today by Judge Nelson McVicar.

They were convicted February 25, on charge of conspiracy and misuse of the mails in the sale of second mortgage bonds of the Mayflower Hotel, Washington. The court held that the evidence against them was "wholly circumstantial." Attorney Earl F. Reed represented the defendants.

Mysterious Auto Linked in Report Of Sea Trip

NORFOLK, Va., April 30.—(INS.)—Out in the gray mists off the Virginia Capes today a final effort was attempted to conclude negotiations with the kidnapers for the return of the stolen Lindbergh baby.

Induced to hope by a photograph of his baby which the abductors sent that he is today on the trail that will lead him to his abducted son, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh himself is on a yacht at sea, according to a persistent but unverified report.

The yacht is the Marcon, lent by Maj. Charles H. Consolvo, multi-millionaire Baltimore and Norfolk hotel man, and aboard it were reported also John H. Curtis, chief of the Norfolk group of negotiators, and his friend, Edwin B. Bruce, Elmira, N. Y.

Credence was given to the rumor that the "flying eagle" was on the Marcon by an odd occurence at Yorktown, Va., just before the boat sailed from the navy base at Newport News, Va., under strictest secrecy.

A limousine with drawn shades, carrying Pennsylvania license plates, which was reported leaving the Hopewell, N. J., estate of Col. Lindbergh during the day, was reported to be the same as the one which arrived at Yorktown, Va., four hours later.

It drove into the Marine-guarded gates of the Navy's submarine depot, from where it would have been easy for a small boat to set out unobserved, for a rendezvous with the Marcon or some other vessel at sea.

STORM DELAYS ROLPH IN OHIO

CINCINNATI, O., April 30.—(AP.)—Governors James Rolph, of California and Fred B. Balzer, of Nevada, attempting a dawn-to-dusk flight from Washington to Los Angeles arrived here at 8:40 a. m. Pittsburgh time, but due to rain and poor visibility their departure was delayed. At 9:30 a. m. their plane still was grounded.

Piloted by Col. Roscoe Turner, who flew them East to the annual governors' conference at Richmond, Va., the governors left Bolling Field at 5:26 a. m., and planned to reach Los Angeles between 6 and 7 p. m. Pacific standard time.

Cincinnati was the first of four scheduled stops on the trip.

Youth Recovering From Broken Neck

SEA CLIFF, N. Y., April 30.—(INS.)—Nine months ago Nicholas Tiffany, member of a prominent St. Louis family, broke his neck after diving into a pool at Newton, Mass. His life was dispaired of, but today the 22-year-old boy is well on his way to recovery.

He is convalescing at the home of Mrs. Robert H. Thayer, daughter of Representative Ruth Pratt. Tiffany's fifth vertebrae was fractured.

Philippine Village Wrecked by Typhoon

MANILA, P. I., April 30.—(INS.)—A typhoon of unprecedented fury today wiped out the village of Jolo on the Island of Jolo and wrecked two ships with the loss of at least three lives, according to radio dispatches to Manila. The typhoon continued to rage menacing other Jolo villages.

Ex-King Manuel's Residence Looted

LONDON, April 30.—(AP.)—Police disclosed today that burglars had ransacked the home of former King Manuel of Portugal in Fulwell Park, Twickenham, last night.

The former King spent the night at home, but servants did not discover the burglary until this morning when they came downstairs to find the library and several other rooms in disorder. Manuel owned a number of rare art items.

DONOHOE MURDER GUN?

MUD-ENCRUSTED AUTOMATIC FOUND IN THE MONONGAHELA

The gun that patient searchers who used a 400-pound magnet found on the bottom of the Monongahela River near Nemacolin ferry, turned over to Fayette's prosecutor for identification as the "missing link"—one of the murder guns—used three years ago in the killing of John F. Donohoe. It was to be cleaned, examined,

PARK BUSY PREPARING CASE AGAINST KLINE AND SUCCOP

SUPPLIES AUDIT HEAD ASSISTS PROSECUTOR

Large Staff Mapping Fight For State; Negley Denies New Jury Panel Tampering

District Attorney Andrew T. Park spent most of today preparing to prosecute the conspiracy case against Major General Kline and his deposed Director of Supplies, Benjamin L. Succop, charged with irregularities in office while assistant to Magistrate Burke.

He was assisted by George F. P. Langfitt, first assistant district attorney; Earl F. Reed, special prosecutor, and Edgar H. Negley as assistant district attorney, and W. D. Stewart, Republican leader.

CONICK IN CONFERENCE

Assistant District Attorney Harry R. Phillips, who presented the indictments and went over various records in the case with M. C. Conick, who had charge of the audit of the Department of Supplies for the Citizens Committee.

Conick will be one of the star witnesses against the deposed staff of which he had charge for Main & Co. auditors, charged with irregularities in the indictments returned against the defendants.

All the exhibits in the case will be ready Monday or Tuesday.

Conick has been frequent conferences with the District Attorney since the staff began building the state's case.

DETECTIVES TO AID

Chief of County Detectives George W. Murtell will be in Butler Monday as well as three or four of his men to give any assistance needed by the state. County Detective David Dreisler will have charge of the transportation of witnesses. Tickets will be supplied those requiring them, the "Harmony" route having been chosen for the purpose.

District Attorney Edgar H. Negley, of Butler, who will assist Park to select the jury which tries the case in Park as soon as the 12 jurors are chosen. Negley said that he has no evidence that any attempt has been made to tamper with the present jury panel drawn early this month.

WOMAN FELLED IN POLICE CHASE

A woman shoplifting suspect, who bowled over a woman pedestrian in crowded Fifth avenue late yesterday in an attempt to escape from detectives, was being held for hearing today in Central Police Court.

The prisoner, Lena Ross, 25, a Negro, of 4028 Ewing street, fled from a department store at Fifth avenue and Smithfield street after Detectives Robert Best and Albert P. Barry detected her stealing a dress, they reported. She ran from the store down Fifth avenue, colliding with an unidentified pedestrian. The chase ended at Wood street, when Best and Barry seized the woman.

The pedestrian, suffering bruises, was treated in a store emergency hospital. Later the detectives arrested two other Negro women alleged to have been in the store with the first suspect.

Register Assessors Named to Vacancies

Five register assessors have been appointed by Judge Elder W. Marshall to fill vacancies before the annual assessment begins in boroughs and townships May 1.

Those appointed are: First Ward, Pitcairn, Emily Dent; Seventh District, South Fayette Township, Andrew Taucher; Second District, Upper St. Clair Township, Walter W. Morrow; First District, Collier Township, William W. Cochrane; and Second District, First Ward, Millvale, Joseph E. Schlueb, Jr.

Woman Balm Seeker 'Accused of 'Affair'

CLEVELAND, O., April 30.—(AP.)—Arthur E. Geiger's attorneys charged Miss Grace Priehs, 30, of Pittsburgh, had an "affair" with a Pittsburgh man.

The charge was made yesterday in a motion for a new trial in the $100,000 breach of promise case Miss Priehs brought against the Alliance (O.) clubman in Federal Court. Miss Priehs won a judgment of $10,000 in the trial.

COUNTY AIRPORT RATES SCORED

Allegheny County's $5,000,000 airport is being used by Trans-Continental and Western Air, Inc., and Pennsylvania Airlines, principal commercial operators in the Pittsburgh district, only on a temporary basis, it was revealed today in a letter protesting rates to Director Halsey R. Bazley.

Rates at the new airport are higher than at any other airport on the line, the letter, sent by Trans-Continental and Western Air officials, points out. The letter expresses the hope that a conference can be arranged whereby more equitable rates may be substituted.

The port, under construction for more than two years, is not yet complete for commercial operation.

Director Bazley asked about the delay, said the Department of Highways maintenance forces working on the port were being rushed and he hoped the administration building and approaches would be completed next month.

As to rates, Bazley revealed that the county was charging the same landing and hangar rates as Bettis airport, it being the Commissioners' policy to hold an equal rate so as not to make unfair competition with private enterprise. Rates at other municipal-owned airports throughout the country are lower than here, he admitted.

Turtle Creek Blaze Injures Two Firemen

Two firemen were burned about the face and hands when fire destroyed the plumbing shop of Jess Stewart and an adjoining garage in Farmer's alley, Turtle Creek, late yesterday.

Assistant Fire Chief F. A. Bethune and A. H. Fasolan were treated by a physician at the fire and sent home. Damage was estimated at $2,500. A bonfire in the rear yard, started by boys, is believed to have been the cause.

$100,000 Damage In York Lumber Fire

YORK, Pa., April 30.—(AP.)—Fire of unknown origin damaged the lumber yard and mill of the J. H. Myers & Son Company in West York Borough to the extent of $100,000 last night.

A number of sheds, three freight cars on a siding in the yard and a wing of the planing mill were consumed by the flames.

STUDENTS HERE FOR CONTESTS

Five hundred Pennsylvania high school students were to participate in the final contests of the fifth annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Forensic and Music League today, with awards to be made to the winners in debates, reading, contests between bands and smaller musical units.

This year's contests are under the sponsorship of the University of Pittsburgh extension division, with general headquarters in Memorial Hall.

Soloists selected as winners in the instrumental contests in the state meeting will attend the national contest May 20 and 21 in Marion, Ind., according to C. Stanton Belfour, secretary of the league and assistant director of the extension division of the university.

FOUR ELECTION BOARDS CALLED

County Commissioners W. D. Mansfield and C. M. Barr today continued supervising the official return board's count of ballots cast in last Tuesday's primary election. The count commenced at noon yesterday and developments prompted the Commissioners to ask four election boards to appear and explain why "the primary elections returns apparently were improper and in error."

The boards called in were the First, Fourth and Fifth districts of the First Ward and the First District of the Fourth Ward.

Yesterday's canvass included the first six districts of the First Ward and the first four districts of the Sixteenth Ward, Pittsburgh; three districts in Aspinwall and three in the First Ward of McKeesport.

It was expected the Commissioners would go last night to Sewickley Valley Hospital to meet with Commissioner C. C. McGovern, who is convalescing from a broken ankle, but the latter's condition caused a postponement. It has been reported McGovern would appear at his office for the regular meeting Tuesday, when it was said the "furlough" plan would be used to drop a number of employes from the payroll.

MARTIN CALLS COMMITTEE MEETING

G. O. P. Session Scheduled May 14 in Phila.; Special Relief Policies Discussed

By MARK SHIELDS

The Republican State Committee has been called to meet in Philadelphia, Saturday, May 14, at 10:30 a. m.

State Chairman Edward Martin has sent the call to all members elected at Tuesday's primary.

Martin will be a candidate to succeed himself as state chairman and probably will be opposed by a candidate supported by Gov. Gifford Pinchot. Two years ago Pinchot attempted unsuccessfully to oust Martin, but his candidate, E. Van Brown, of Lycoming County, was overwhelmingly defeated.

In the primary this year it was generally believed that Pinchot was making a drive for state committeemen that he might renew his fight on Martin. Analysis of the results in the several senatorial districts indicates he has failed again, though in Allegheny County a Pinchot candidate will probably get two of the 12 votes, while two years ago the vote was unanimously for Martin.

RELIEF SESSION PARLEY

At a meeting of regular Republican leaders yesterday in Harrisburg discussion was had of policies to be followed at an expected special session. While Gov. Pinchot has remained silent on the object, the report persists that he will call the members to meet May 9 for the purpose of passing unemployment and economic relief legislation.

The Governor, through Attorney General William A. Schnader, has been sounding out regular leaders on a harmony program of legislation, to avoid the jams which occurred in the special session last year, resulting only in the passage of the Talbot bill for a $10,000,000 appropriation for relief.

Grover C. Talbot, author of the bill and renominated to the House from Delaware County, is being discussed as Speaker of the House at the regular session next January, supplanting C. Jay Goodnough, of Cameron County. Goodnough is affiliated with the Pinchot-Grundy wing of the party, which appears to have lost control of the House.

Piazzas Questioned In Mysterious Fire

Philip Piazza, 19, for whom the river was dragged last November when his car was found abandoned on the Sixteenth Street Bridge, was taken into custody yesterday in connection with a mysterious fire that damaged a vacant house in the 400 block Shadeland avenue, Tuesday, according to a police report.

Philip, his brother, Michael, and his father, Anthony, all of Luzerne street, North Side, were released pending further investigation after they had denied being in the vicinity prior to the fire, according to Detective Michael Tortorelli, of the bomb and arson squad.

Fireworks Sale Banned at Arnold

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., April 30.—Burgess John W. Hunger, Arnold, has placed a ban on the sale and use of fireworks in celebrating July 4. "A safe and sane Fourth is my desire," he said. His action followed citizens' requests.

MARGIN DROPS FOR ROOSEVELT

PHILADELPHIA, April 30 (AP.)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's lead over Alfred E. Smith in unofficial returns from Tuesday's preferential presidential balloting stood at 13,509 today with 1,156 districts missing. Figures received from 7,023 of the 8,181 districts gave Roosevelt a total of 106,886; Smith, 93,377.

Complete but unofficial returns from the big anthracite counties of Lackawanna and Luzerne reduced Roosevelt's lead. Other unofficial returns for various offices were:

For the Republican senator nomination, 7,833 districts gave Senator James J. Davis 884,061; Gen. Smedley Butler, 496,649.

For the Republican auditor general nomination, 7,114 districts, Frank E. Baldwin, 515,747; Ralph E. Flinn, 366,158.

For the three Republican Superior Court nominations, 7,113 districts, Arthur H. James, 672,926; Joseph M. Parker, 667,108; Joseph Stadtfeld, 639,749; Robert S. Gawthrop, 544,774.

Seven Get Terms In Dry Law Cases

Sixty-two defendants in Federal Court yesterday pleaded guilty to dry law violations and three to other offenses. Judge F. P. Schoonmaker sentenced seven prohibition violators to jail and put the others on probation or fined them.

Salvatore Villari, 30, was sentenced three years to the penitentiary for possessing and passing counterfeit $10 Federal Reserve Bank notes. Tucker Mogart, 32, was sentenced six months in jail for violating the Mann act, and Osmon Sutton, one year and a day in a government reformatory for transporting a stolen automobile in interstate commerce.

Charges Wife Ejected Him for Lack of Job

After 30 years of married life, his wife put him out of his home when he was unable to find employment, Rudolph P. Glasser charged in his divorce suit against Martha Jane Glasser, 7161 Westmoreland street, in Common Pleas Court. They were married March 23, 1901, and have five children, four adults.

Glasser charged she refused him food, frequently hiding it in the cellar. He declared she frequently attacked him with a butcher knife and beat him on numerous occasions.

Two Hurt as Auto Crashes Into Pole

A man and woman were in Columbia Hospital today suffering cuts and bruises incurred when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a pole at Rosedale and Hill avenues, Wilkinsburg. They are Arch Mackrell, 37, of 7337 Idlewild street, and Mrs. Florence Mackrell, of Canton, O. Mackrell told Wilkinsburg police, who are holding the couple for investigation, that he was bringing Mrs. Mackrell to Pittsburgh for a visit.

Man Found Slugged In North Side Park

Slugged as he traversed West Park early today, J. W. Henderson, 53, of 304 West North avenue, was in Presbyterian Hospital suffering from a possible fracture of the skull. Henderson was found unconscious by a passerby who called police.

GARDEN PLOTS GIVEN TO IDLE

Forty-five acres of rich bottom land in Blawnox were to be turned over to unemployed of Blawnox, Aspinwall and Sharpsburg for gardens this summer, with formal ceremonies at the plot today by the Thrift Garden Committee of the Allegheny County Emergency Association.

The land is the first to be opened for garden use by the Thrift Garden Committee, which has developed a garden program for the benefit of the unemployed and needy in the county. It is owned by the McIntosh Hemphill Company and lies between the Freeport road and the Allegheny River near the county Workhouse property.

The land will be formally turned over to the gardens by Attorney Andrew G. Smith, chairman of the operating sub-committee of the garden movement, who will be one of the speakers.

Probe Mystery Blast In Ohio Strike Zone

CADIZ, O., April 30. (AP.)—The quiet of the Eastern Ohio coal strike region was broken last night by a mysterious explosion in the vicinity of the Tash mine, near here. Following the blast, a flaming cross appeared in the darkness.

National guardsmen, sent to the strike zone during recent disorders in which one man was killed, reported the incident. An investigation failed to reveal either the cause or the exact location of the detonation.

Glassport Girl Held To Explain Absence

A 16-year-old Glassport girl, missing from her home for the past two weeks, was being detained today by police while officials investigated her absence. The girl, Mary Dipiera, of 743 Indiana avenue, was recognized yesterday when she inquired at Aliquippa Police Station for the address of a relative. She disappeared after visiting a girl friend shortly before midnight, April 16, police said.

Democrats Here Thanked by Smith

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, has issued a statement of thanks to Allegheny County Democratic voters who supported the campaign for unpledged delegates to the Democratic national convention. The message was received by Attorney Charles A. Jones, local campaign chairman.

AID NEEDY, LET SUBWAY WAIT, CITY TOLD

Monro, Stating Chamber's Opposition to Loop, Tells Council to Assure Relief

That the city should save its resources to meet the need for direct relief rather than spend $6,000,000 for a subway was the stand taken by W. L. Monro in presenting to City Council yesterday the report of the Chamber of Commerce opposing construction of any subway now.

Opposition to the plan of Norman F. Brown and Edward Snodgrass, Jr., was also voiced by the Municipal Planning Association, represented by Frederick Bigger. The reports were filed by Council for further consideration.

URGES TRAFFIC RELIEF

A discussion of the merits of the subway, written by Charles M. Reppert, Chief City Engineer, was read. Reppert contended relief of traffic congestion will tend to increase downtown real estate values and that something should be done in the interests of the car rider, who represents about 90 per cent of the passenger traffic.

Councilman Charles Anderson demanded to know what the cost of engineering on the subway would be and who would get the money. Reppert said most of the money would be spent in the city engineering department.

HERRON CITES EXPENSE

Council President John S. Herron again questioned the advisability of spending of more money on planning a subway which may never be built. He asked Monro whether, if all difficulties were removed, the Chamber of Commerce committee would still be against the subway. Monro replied:

"Yes; I would wait."

Herron asked Bigger if he had any other improvements to suggest in place of the subway and was told a list would be prepared. The city planners, he declared, were in a measure responsible for the fact that no new Pennsylvania Railroad station has been built, because they held up construction with a dispute over a traffic circle at Liberty avenue and Grant street.

SPORTS EVENTS AIDING RELIEF

A polo game at Hunt Armory tonight, proceeds of which will go to the Family-Help-Family campaign, marks the opening of a long list of events arranged by women workers in the drive. Other events are a series of bridge parties and golf games arranged by six of the leading golf clubs of the county, which will be played May 7 and 8.

H. L. Deitrich, secretary of the Washington-Heights Board of Trade, in a letter to the campaign headquarters, reported that his organization has gone on record recommending the movement, and pledged its support.

Sewickley opened its part of the campaign in the borough hall last night, with Capt. Cyrus B. Miller in charge. Speakers were A. C. Robinson and J. C. Chaplin. Fifteen teams have been organized in the district to cover Sewickley, Edgeworth, Haysville, Glen Osborne, Leetsdale, Fair Oaks and Sewickley, Leet and Sewickley Heights Townships.

Contributions to care for 52 families were reported today by the women's division, bringing the number of families already provided for to 4,633. Estimates are that 28,000 families in the county are in need.

Efforts today were being bent toward the next report meeting of the women's division in the William Penn Hotel Tuesday. To date contributions of more than $5,600 from schools, caring for 56 families, have been made, according to Mrs. Harry J. Miller.

Closing of Federal Office Here Fought

WASHINGTON, April 30.—(AP.)—Representative Shreve, of Erie, said he had started a movement in the House to prevent abolition of the Pittsburgh office of the Department of Commerce.

The Commerce Department announced its intention of cutting off the Pittsburgh office when the Senate ordered a 10 per cent cut in all departmental appropriations. Protests against such action have flooded the Pennsylvania delegation's offices.

25 Per Cent Pay Cut Urged On Beaver Carmen

Employes of the Beaver Valley Traction Company, a subsidiary of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, have been asked to accept a reduction of 25 per cent in wages, and are expected to vote on it next week. The cut is requested because of the financial condition of the company. The road employs 80 men.

The proposal became known yesterday after announcement by the Street Railway Employes' Union in Pittsburgh that it had accepted the Pittsburgh Railways Company compromise reduction of 7½ per cent in wages, instead of the 10 per cent originally requested. The pay of one-man operatives beginning Sunday will be 74 cents an hour and of two-men cars 65 cents. They have been paid 80 and 70 cents, respectively, under the scale expiring today.

Vice President Thomas Fitzgerald said regarding the cut:

"I am glad the controversy has been settled."

The company will sign a two-year contract with the employes, saving the company $300,000 for the remainder of 1932.

It was learned the company will give consideration to the elimination of the weekly pass as a trial experiment. It is desired to test out the belief of some that the pass is costing the company revenue.

Original 'Alice' Greeted At N. Y. for Carroll Fete

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP.)—Smiling with shy good humor, a sweet-faced English gentlewoman who will be 80 next week, had a strenuous welcome as the original Alice in Wonderland, when she arrived on the Berengaria yesterday.

Mrs. Reginald Hargreaves, of Cufnels, near Southampton, England, at first sight gave little suggestion of the little girl who listened with wide blue eyes to fascinating nonsense stories of the Rev. Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, deacon of Christ Church and lecturer in mathematics.

But mobile corners of her mouth, and a twinkle in eyes still clear and blue, identified her unmistakably with that child who chuckled in delight at stories of the white rabbit and the little girl who nearly drowned in a pool of her own tears, shed before she shrank to dwarf size down a famous rabbit-hole.

For the first time in a life of carefully preserved obscurity, she faced a brigade of photographers on the liner's deck. She knew the sudden glare of limelight was part of this visit to America, sponsored by Columbia University in celebration of the centenary year of Dodgson's, or Lewis Carroll's birth.

Ceremonies will be held at the university on May 4, her own birthday, because she was unable to come to America last January 26, the birthday of Carroll.

RIOTS FEARED AFTER CONVICTION OF MASSIE DEFENDANTS

HAWAIIAN OFFICIALS TAKE PRECAUTIONS TO QUELL DISTURBANCES

only small crowds attended the motion picture theaters. Among the small groups on the streets the verdict was the invariable topic of discussion.

Sailors strolled along singly or in pairs, conspicuous by their white suits. Some residents expressed fear of reprisals by the sailors.

It was recalled that the enlisted men, after the mistrial last December of the five men in the Massie attack case, exhibited a strong desire to come to Honolulu and "clean up the town."

The racial factor continued to remain in the background of the many ramifications of the case. Some Hawaiians and orientals were outspoken in favor of the verdict which was returned by a jury of eight Caucasians, three Chinese and a native.

Massie's Lips White As Clerk Reads Fate

With varying reactions the quartet received the findings of the jury. Lieut. Massie, who admitted killing the native after Kahahawai allegedly had admitted taking part in an attack on Mrs. Massie, stood with set, white lips as his fate was read by the court clerk.

In the jury's findings the insanity defense set up in behalf of Lieut. Massie was disregarded. This and the unwritten law had been pleaded by Clarence Darrow, aged leader of the defense.

Darrow, who came out of retirement to defend the four, said of the verdict:

"I am very much disappointed."

Prosecutor John C. Kelley's only comment was:

"The verdict meets the ends of justice."

When the short courtroom session was over, Darrow met Kelly and extended his hand, saying:

"I certainly never expected it."

Later the veteran criminal lawyer remarked:

"All I can say is that I am disappointed. I don't see how they could do this."

Mrs. Fortescue, mother of Mrs. Massie, heard the reading of her destiny without flinching. She turned and spoke to Jones, who was standing beside her. Neither Jones nor Lord showed any signs of feeling.

The four defendants were charged with second degree murder, which calls for a sentence of 30 years to life imprisonment. Judge Charles S. Davis had instructed the jury it could find the quartet guilty as charged, guilty of manslaughter, or not guilty. He added a possible finding of not guilty by reason of insanity for Massie.

Notice of appeal was given by George S. Leisure, defense attorney. In the course of procedure the case would go to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in California.

The jury's findings left a variety of possibilities in the way of sentences. The maximum penalty for manslaughter is 10 years. The lightest sentence possible would be a suspended sentence for that length of time, which is within the power of Judge Davis. But the court also has authority to fix the punishment anywhere between these extremes.

Governor Has Power to Pardon Four Defendants

In addition Gov. Judd has the power to pardon any or all of them.

Judge Davis fixed next Friday as the date for pronouncing sentence and the four were put in custody of Capt. Ward Wortman, U. S. N., and taken to Pearl harbor for the night.

Public reaction to the verdict varied. Generally it was a surprise because rumors had been circulated the jury probably would convict Lieut. Massie only. Few expected the conviction of Mrs. Fortescue.

Commander R. W. Bates, head of the navy shore patrol, said he expected no disturbance in the city and would not order additional sailors for patrol duty. He said:

"I don't think it is necessary. The personnel can take care of itself."

William B. Pittman, attorney for Horace Ida, one of the four remaining men accused of attacking Mrs. Massie, asked a police guard for the Ida home.

Pittman also represented Kahahawai in the first attack trial, which ended in a jury disagreement. The lynching victim was abducted by Mrs. Fortescue and the Navy men from the Judiciary Building while making his daily report to the court last January pending retrial of the attack charge.

Shortly after the jury disagreement in the attack case, Ida was seized and beaten by about 20 men in a vain effort to get him to confess. After the lynching Ida and his co-defendants, Ben Ahakeulo, Henry Chang and David Takai, who had been at liberty under bond, voluntarily went to jail for protection. More recently, however, they left the jail for their homes.

Last night they were placed back in jail as a safety precaution.

The conviction gave a notable victory to John C. Kelley in his first case as Honolulu's new public prosecutor. He was appointed to office as the result of the political shakeup following the abduction and slaying.

In spite of his victory, Kelley remained in a complicated position with relation to the figure connecting the two cases—Mrs. Massie.

As a defense witness in the lynching case Mrs. Massie figured in an angry clash with the prosecutor when he sought testimony from her that she had had differences with her husband a few months before the attack last September. Angrily she tore up a paper which allegedly contained her written admission of a rift. Kelley arose and said:

"Thank you, Mrs. Massie. At last you have shown yourself in your true colors."

Remark May Bar Kelley From Attack Case Trial

Some naval officers contended Kelley's remark would prevent him from prosecuting the forthcoming retrial of the attack case. He announced it would be retried, but declined to say whether he would head the prosecution.

The conviction of the lynching case defendants also was prefaced by an angry outburst of Mrs. Massie at Kelley.

Just after the jury had been called into court by Judge Davis, who wanted to inquire about its progress, Kelley, Lieut. and Mrs. Massie and Lord met as they were leaving the Judiciary Building.

Lord, naturally good natured, took Kelley's hand and said:

"No hard feelings."

Massie, who had been given a verbal lashing by Kelley in the closing arguments, likewise shook the prosecutor's hand. He said:

"If I ever had anything against you, Mr. Kelley—"

Kelley interjected:

"I haven't anything against you personally, nor against your wife."

Her eyes blazing with fury, Mrs. Massie turned on Kelley and hissed:

"No, you haven't anything against me!"

Massie soothed her but she was sobbing when he led her away to an automobile.

If Kelley acts for the Territory in the attack retrial Mrs. Massie of necessity will be his chief witness.

Navy and Army Forces Held Ready for Trouble

HONOLULU, T. H., April 30.—(INS.)—Armed forces from the Navy and Army bases here were reported ready today to move into Honolulu should any demonstration occur as the result of the verdict of conviction in the Massie-Fortescue trial.

The city remained outwardly calm, but excitement seethed beneath the surface.

The naval base at Pearl Harbor and the Army headquarters at Schofield Barracks were watchful for any emergency.

Chief of Police Charles Weeber held his reserves in readiness. No loiterers were allowed on the streets, and public buildings were guarded.

Because of the resentment in naval circles over the verdict, and over the scathing attack delivered by Prosecutor John C. Kelley against the Navy in his closing arguments to the jury, the Navy patrol kept sailors off the streets.

Hoover's Aid Asked For 'Honor Slayers'

HONOLULU, T. H., April 30.—(INS.)—An appeal to President Hoover to intervene and bring about the freedom of the four Americans convicted of manslaughter in the "honor killing" of Joseph Kahahawai was voiced today by Mrs. Anne Kluegel.

Mrs. Kluegel, who, as a result of the Massie case, led the white citizens of Honolulu in a successful demand for reform of vice conditions, sent a cable to the President.

The Four Defendants Found Guilty of Manslaughter in Hawaii

E. J. LORD — MRS. GRANVILLE FORTESCUE — ALBERT O. JONES — LIEUT. THOMAS H. MASSIE

THE FOUR DEFENDANTS—A U. S. SOCIETY LEADER AND THREE U. S. NAVAL MEN—FOUND GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER BY POLYGLOT JURY IN HONOLULU

PLEA TO HOOVER IN HAWAII CASE

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP.)—Dudley Field Malone, attorney who at first considered going to Honolulu with Clarence Darrow, last night was informed of the Massie case verdict and immediately wired President Hoover urging that the four defendants be "placed aboard a warship and brought to the first port of jurisdiction on the mainland, namely San Francisco." The telegram said:

"I most respectfully submit that you do now what you should have done at the beginning, namely: Order Lieut. Massie, his wife, his mother-in-law and the two enlisted men on board a warship and bring them to the first port of jurisdiction on the mainland, namely, San Francisco, where they can get a fair trial and the protection American citizens should be properly entitled to."

Maj. Granville Fortescue, husband of Mrs. Fortescue, received the news of the verdict as if it stunned him.

"What?" he asked after it had been read to him. A moment later he hung up the telephone receiver with a brief:

"Nothing to say now—thanks."

4 HALF-CASTES FACE RETRIAL

HONOLULU, T. H., April 30.—(INS.)—The retrial of the four half-castes accused with Joseph Kahahawai of a brutal assault on Mrs. Thalia Massie will probably be set next week, Assistant Attorney General Harold Kay said today.

It was considered doubtful if Prosecutor John C. Kelley would handle the case, inasmuch as Mrs. Massie must be the principal witness against the four men. She has become openly antagonistic towards Kelley as the result of his cross-examination of her during the "honor slaying" trial.

4 Divorces Granted, Six Actions Filed

Divorces were granted in Common Pleas Court to Pearl Lutz from Harry P. Lutz, Edith B. Reisch from Clark L. Reisch, Dorothea Gwynn from Koferd Gwynn, Elizabeth Hagman from Fred Hagman.

Divorce suits were filed by Ruth B. Smith against Merrott W. Smith, Blair M. Spangler against Anna Spangler, Mary G. Wattles against G. Warren Wattles, Harvey Shrover against Kathryn E. Shrover, Leslie C. Wilson against Margaretta Wilson, Eva C. Kukolic against John Kukolic.

Rancher's Death Laid To Bite of Spider

YUBA CITY, Cal., April 30.—(INS.)—Physicians yesterday attributed the death of Erwin Hubbs, 45, a rancher, to the bite of the poisonous "black widow" spider.

MRS. THOMAS H. MASSIE . . . DAUGHTER OF MRS. FORTESCUE

KILLED IN ROW OVER CAT

An argument between neighbors over the death of a pet cat resulted in the killing of Ignatz Oznick, 40, of 232 Baker street, Aliquippa, early today. He died in the Rochester General Hospital, Rochester. Eli Luther, 23, of 237 Baker street, Aliquippa, was held, charged with the slaying.

Police said Oznick was struck over the head with a pole wielded by Luther in an argument which started after he accused Oznick of killing his cat.

The pair had gone to a hill above their homes to cut bean poles when the fight occurred. Oznick's skull was fractured.

Liggett Honored On 75th Birthday

The seventy-fifth birthday of Thomas Liggett, sportsman, conservationist and civic leader, was celebrated at a dinner party last night in Duquesne Club. The event, under the auspices of the Naturalists' Club, was addressed by former governors John K. Tener and John S. Fisher, John M. Phillips, A. E. Braun, A. T. Benson, Ralph L. Smith, Stewart Johnston, A. W. Cook and Florent Gibson.

Oil City Church Calls New Pastor

OIL CITY, Pa., April 30.—The Rev. Thomas L. Small, formerly assistant pastor at Christ Cathedral, St. Louis, arrived here to assume his duties as rector of Christ Episcopal Church tomorrow.

Massie's Mother Stunned At Son's Conviction

WINCHESTER, KY., April 30.—(AP.)—Stunned by the verdict that may send her son, Lieut. Thomas Massie, 24, to prison for manslaughter, Mrs. W. S. Massie of Winchester, mother of the naval officer convicted last night with three others in the Honolulu honor slaying, today had no definite plans concerning her future course in regards to the case.

Informed last night of the verdict, Mrs. Massie broke down after saying "convicted of manslaughter—what does that mean?" She seemed unable to comprehend the full meaning of the jury's findings.

Mrs. Massie's daughter, Dorothy, was with her when news of the verdict was received. Both said they had expected acquittal for the former Winchester youth. Mrs. Massie said she had made no plans to go to her son and did not know what she would do.

WOMAN LOSES DOCTOR HUNTED BORROWED BABY IN CO-ED CASE

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—(AP.)—A tale of baby substitution by a wealthy and childless Philadelphia matron had a sequel when the baby in the case was relinquished and returned to the hospital in which it was born.

Mrs. Helen Blair Sullivan, of Merion, a suburb, was accused by her husband, Euston Sullivan, of representing the baby as her own. He charged the child belonged to Miss Edith Crebbe, a Detroit nurse, who was arrested in Downingtown, Pa., for questioning about a letter she mailed to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh concerning his kidnaped son.

Miss Crebbe told police she had refused to give her baby to Mrs. Sullivan, but had helped her obtain a child from Madalene Loughlin, Williamsport, Pa.

Officials of the Children's Catholic Bureau said Mrs. Sullivan had notified them of the baby's whereabouts, and the child was returned to the hospital yesterday.

Two Autos Damaged When Garage Burns

Two automobiles were damaged $850 in a fire of undetermined origin which partially destroyed the garage of Charles Blume, of Marengo and Salisbury streets, owner of one of the machines. The other was owned by J. J. Mitchell, of 2012 Freedom street. Damage to the garage was estimated at $200.

"Globe Trotter" Talks At Vocational Meet

Louis L. Kaufman, the Sun-Telegraph "Globe Trotter," addressed the vocational conference on radio broadcasting at Peabody High School yesterday. Kaufman, introduced by M. M. Redenbaugh, explained the advantages of a radio station to a newspaper.

COURT ATTACHE SEARCHING ATTORNEY CLARENCE DARROW

SHANGHAI BOMB VICTIM DIES

SHANGHAI, April 30.—(AP.)—One of the five high Japanese officials injured by a bomb explosion in Honkew Park yesterday, Y. Kawabata, president of the Shanghai Japanese Residents' Association, died today.

Of the other four, Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese minister to China, was in the most danger. Thirty-two pieces of the hand grenade alleged to have been thrown by Yin Kitsu, a Korean revolutionary from Manchuria, entered M. Shigemitsu's body.

The other victims, Gen. Yoshinori Shirakawa, Maj. Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda and Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, were recovering. Gen. Shirakawa, commander-in-chief of the Japanese land forces here, lost all his teeth. Admiral Nomura lost an eye and was seriously wounded in the head.

Auto Liability Exemption Upset

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 30.—(AP.)—The Kentucky automobile law exempting automobile owners from liability for injury to non-paying passengers, unless the owner or driver intentionally caused them injury, was held unconstitutional by the State Court of Appeals yesterday.

In overruling a Jefferson County Circuit Court decision, which had upheld the law, the state's highest court held the statute violated the state constitution.

Capital Trio Harpist Seeks Reno Divorce

RENO, Nev., April 30.—(INS.)—Charging cruelty, Mrs. Louis Harris Salls, a member of the Washington, D. C., Zimmer Harpist Trio, today had on file suit to divorce Kenneth T. Salls.

RIPLEY TO GO COLLEGIATE ON VISIT HERE

'Believe It or Not' Creator To Visit Tech and Pitt; Boosts Airplane Contest

Robert L. Ripley, distinguished creator of the "Believe It or Not" cartoons that open the eyes of Sun-Telegraph readers every day in the week, will be in Pittsburgh Tuesday for his first stop from San Francisco to New York City following his recent arrival from another tour in strange foreign lands.

Believe It or Not Ripley is going to be "taken for a ride" when he gets here Tuesday morning. In the first place, he is going collegiate. He gets into town shortly after 11 o'clock and will come directly to the Sun-Telegraph office and then be taken to Memorial Hall for a 12:30 o'clock noon assemblage of the students of Pitt University.

This meeting will be under the sponsorship of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity.

TO ADDRESS STUDENTS

"Rip" will make a talk to the students, tell them a lot of things that will be hard to believe, yet he'll make them believe every one of them.

The student body of Pitt, as far as classes will permit, will attend this assembly and the public at large is also invited. Admission will be free.

At 2 o'clock he will meet the entire student body of Duquesne University in the gymnasium.

At 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day Ripley goes over to the Tartan banner speaking in the Little Theater at Carnegie Tech. This meeting is for students only.

Sandwiched in between his collegiate appearances, "Bob" will be a guest of President William E. Benswanger for the Pirates-Cubs game at Forbes Field. A special box has been reserved for Mr. Believe It or Not and his party. It is expected that the famous cartoonist will be on hand for the opening of the game at 3 o'clock and remain during the greater part of it.

Seven-thirty o'clock brings "Rip" to the research laboratories of the Westinghouse company for a glimpse of the new wonders in science.

SPEAKS OVER WCAE

During the day Ripley will go on the air over WCAE with the Sun-Telegraph Globe Trotter, and later direct from the WCAE studio.

Incidentally, Ripley is making this special visit to Pittsburgh to encourage readers of the Sun-Telegraph in the national "Believe It or Not" contest which begins Tuesday in this newspaper, and in which a Curtiss-Wright monoplane, a Rockne six deluxe sedan and several other grand prizes will be given away.

Full details of the contest will appear in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

New 'Phone Cable For Neville Island

Replacement of the existing telephone cable on Neville Island with a larger one will be started by the Bell Telephone Company next month, according to announcement today by William Bradford, division manager.

The program calls for removal of 6,502 feet of cable containing from 151 to 200 pairs of wires, and its replacement with 6,512 feet containing 303 pairs. The major benefit to be derived will be reflected in better transmission of telephone calls, the official said. The project will be completed in October.

Gregory Suspects Held for Egg Battle

Five men turned over to homicide detectives for questioning in connection with an attack upon Mrs. Alberta Gregory, 23, widow of William Gregory, gang murder victim, were returned to North Side police yesterday.

The men denied complicity in the attack, but will face arraignment for an egg-throwing contest they staged at East Lacock and Anderson streets early yesterday, several hours after Mrs. Gregory had been found at Twelfth street and Spring way. She told police she was thrown from the assailant's car. Mrs. Gregory was reported recovering in West Penn Hospital.

Pennsy Real Estate Official Retiring

W. K. McElroy, of 209 East End avenue, real estate official of the Pennsylvania Railroad, will be retired on pension tomorrow after 53 years of service. He began his railroad career in the car record office of the old Allegheny Valley Railroad at Pike and Eleventh streets. In August, 1900, he entered the real estate department.

Mrs. Bruce to Be Presented At British Court May 11

LONDON, April 30.—(INS.)—The American Embassy today announced the names of 21 American women who will be presented to King George and Queen Mary at this year's two royal court presentations at Buckingham Palace.

Thirteen will be presented on May 11 and eight on the evening of May 12.

Simultaneously with announcement of the names, the embassy revealed that Mme. Pauline DeFleurian, wife of the French ambassador, will present the American women at the first court.

This occasioned some surprise in American circles when it was not immediately realized that Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, daughter of Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon and official embassy hostess, has not yet been formally presented to their majesties.

Mrs. Bruce will be presented at the first court and will make the presentations of the Americans at the second.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Beebe, of Wallingford, Pa., will be presented at the first court.

U. P. CHURCHES OPEN MISSION CONGRESS HERE ON MAY 20

11 METHODIST DELEGATES TO ATTEND MEET

Six Ministers, Five Laymen Leave for Atlantic City; Consider New Liturgy

Six pastors and five laymen from the Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church will attend the thirty-first quadrennial meeting of the general conference of the church, which begins May 2 in Atlantic City.

The ministerial delegation, headed by the Rev. Alvy J. Day of the Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, will include the Rev. B. W. Hutchinson, of Oakmont; the Rev. J. S. Pastorius, of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church; the Rev. W. S. Thorn, district superintendent; the Rev. D. R. B. Urmy and the Rev. W. L. Watkinson, of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

The lay delegation will consist of Elmer L. Kidney, P. W. Metzgar, John W. Vickerman, of Pittsburgh, and E. C. Chamberlain, of Uniontown, and Charles R. Griffith, of Marion Center, Pa.

Two new orders of worship, designed to give the Methodist Episcopal Church throughout the world a common liturgy, have been approved by the Board of Bishops and will be submitted for consideration at the conference, it was announced. It was explained that the Wesley service has been revised and shortened to give the congregation larger opportunity to participate in services.

DR. KING TO SPEAK

The Rev. Dr. W. R. King, of New York, general secretary of the General Home Missions Council, will speak at the Monday morning session on "Home Missions in the Present Crisis." At the afternoon session the speaker will be the Rev. Dr. J. Campbell White, of the Forty-fourth Street United Presbyterian Church, New York.

Closing sessions of the congress will be addressed by the Rev. Dr. A. J. Randles, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church, New Castle, who will speak on "What Must America Do to Be Saved?"

'Faith' Is Subject At Salvation Army

"The Omnipotence of Faith" will be the topic at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow in the Salvation Army auditorium, 425 Boulevard of the Allies, with Adjt. John Brunner as the principal speaker. He will also speak at the 8 p. m. service, with "Precious Truth for Perishing Sinners" as his subject. No. 1 Corps band and the Songsters Brigade will offer a program of music. Sunday school services will be held at 1:45 p. m., and the Young People's Legion will meet at 6 p. m.

Recital Arranged By Church Choir

The quartet and choir of the Third United Presbyterian Church, Shady avenue and Northumberland street, will present a recital Wednesday night, May 4, in the auditorium of the church. James B. Meanor is director of the program, and Mrs. Thomas Murdoch, accompanist.

Butler St. Church Announces Program

The Rev. Samuel Hill, of the Butler Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Fortieth and Butler streets, will speak tomorrow morning on "The Promise of the Father." His evening theme will be "That Tired Feeling and How to Cure It."

Homestead Park Sunday Program

"Doing and Hearing the Word" will be discussed tomorrow morning by the Rev. L. W. Rupp, of the Messiah Lutheran Church, Homestead Park. There will be no evening service during the daylight saving period.

New Pastor

HERBERT BEECHER HUDNUT

PASTOR CALLED AT BELLEVUE

A call to the Rev. Herbert Beecher Hudnut, pastor of the Windermere Presbyterian Church, East Cleveland, O., has been extended by the congregation of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church.

He was graduated from Princeton University in 1916 and served overseas as second lieutenant, 115 Field Artillery. He had six years' experience in the steel business in Youngstown, O., and was graduated in 1926 from the Western Theological Seminary. He has served three churches since his ordination.

The Rev. Hudnut has been called to fill the pastorate vacated recently by the Rev. R. F. Galbreath.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

A wedding of great interest to society folks in Pittsburgh is announced today. The Philetus H. Holts, of Summit, N. J., announce the marriage yesterday of their niece, Anna King Colton, of New York, daughter of the late John B. Coltons, to Harden Church, son of Col. Samuel Harden Church of Pittsburgh, which was solemnized in the Holt home. Officiating was the Rev. Malcolm Douglas, of Short Hills, N. J. There was a small reception later in the home of Steele Savage. Owing to the recent death of the bride's mother, only relatives were present.

The bride wore a gown of powder blue crepe with a matching hat, and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Sigrid Buehr, of New York, was the matron of honor, and Steele Savage, the best man.

After a southern motor trip the Churches will reside in Silver Mine, Conn., for the summer, and in the fall, in New York.

Mrs. Church attended the Kent Place School, Summit, N. J., and the bridegroom, a composer, attended Harvard University.

Announce Betrothal

Another romance of spring has ended in an engagement. The George Cope Stewards of Butler make known the betrothal of their daughter, Katherine Elizabeth, to Porter Sawyer Kier, Jr., son of the late Porter Sawyer Kier, and of Mrs. Kier, Darlington road.

Katherine studied at Winchester, and is a graduate of Vassar, and her fiance is a Dartmouth man.

DRAMA LEAGUE PRIZES AWARDED

Mimes Takes First Place Trophy; Dracomtra Players, Second; Schenley High, Third

The Bellefield Mimes were awarded the first prize of $100 and the Samuel French trophy in the Pittsburgh Drama League's eighth amateur players' contest, which ended last night. The group presented Milne's comedy, "The Camberley Triangle," on the first night of the contest under the direction of Mrs. Isabelle Jones.

The second prize of $50 and the silver cup given by Carroll H. Fitzhugh, vice president of the league, were given to the Dracomtra players of the Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church, who presented Kenyon Nicholson's tragedy, "Confession," under the direction of Dr. H. Ward Ewalt, Jr.

A silver cup sent from Chicago by Mrs. Frank R. Wheeler, president of the league, was awarded, together with a cash prize of $35, to Thespians I of the Schenley High School, who appeared in a delightful phantasy by Louise Saunders called "The Knave of Hearts" with Miss R. Olive Wolf as their director.

For the first time in the history of the contest two entrants tied for one of the prizes, and the fourth prize of $25 was divided between the Gargoyle Club of the Shady Side Academy, presenting "The Waning Moon" by Louise Van Voorhis Armstrong, and the Studio Players of Bradford Woods in an unpublished play by Beatrice Lewis, a graduate of the Pennsylvania College for Women and a student of the drama department, Carnegie Institute of Technology. The play, which is Russian in locale, is called "The Night I died."

Two Tie For Prize

Honorable mention for excellence in individual acting was given to Bertha Wilson, who played "The Lady Violetta" in the Schenley High School production; Richard Lange, as Cyril Norwood in "The Camberley Triangle," and Howard Blaine in "Confession." As a surprise prize Miss Wilson was given two subscription tickets for the plays to be given next season in Carnegie Institute of Technology. The awards were made by Chester M. Wallace of Carnegie Tech's drama department. The contest attracted capacity audiences throughout the week, and there was standing room only at midnight when the decision of the judges was made.

A clearing house by which might be avoided conflict in club dates was suggested yesterday at the meeting of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs in the Homewood Presbyterian Church. Forty-three clubs were represented by 176 women, and the attendance baskets were won by the Mothers' Club of McKeesport and the Civic Club of Wilkinsburg.

DRIVE AIDED BY FATHER COX

Father Cox is employing all of his personal and organization resources in making the new Father Cox-Sun Telegraph Home Delivery Drive a success. He has been in receipt of many congratulatory letters on it and has overlooked no opportunity to exploit the drive over the radio, among his own parishioners and among the pastors of other churches of his own denomination.

Father Cox

Father Cox said last night:

"I am inclined to think that I will get equally as much support from the clergymen of the other denominations as I will get from the clergy of my own church. From many of the others I have already received grateful assistance and encouragement."

His breadline at old St. Patrick's gets longer and longer every day, the demand for baskets of food for poor families gets greater and greater and the necessity for funds to carry on his activities becomes more and more urgent as the activities continue.

If you wish to help Father Cox send in your order, either to Father Cox or to the Sun-Telegraph, to have this paper delivered to your home by carrier. A subscription blank will be found in this issue.

Active Schedule

In a month when the majority of clubs are lessening their activities or ceasing them entirely, the Aspinwall Woman's Club has issued an especially lengthy bulletin. The finance committee will meet Monday to complete plans for the sunshine luncheon on June 2. The literature and arts department will have its closing meeting on Tuesday, and on Tuesday night the club will sponsor a concert in the high school as a benefit for the community welfare fund.

At the general club meeting on the 19th, 10-minute talks will be given on the outstanding book, play and event of the year. Mrs. J. A. Bell, Mrs. T. S. Dickey and Mrs. O. P. Rowland giving the program.

NEW SILK ORGANDIE FROCKS BID HIGH FOR THE SEASON'S HONORS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, April 30.—The new silk organdie that will be seen everywhere this summer is truly a sheer delight. It is a little more sophisticated than its cotton sister and so will be welcomed by the more mature woman who feels that an organdie evening frock is not for her. The weave and look of cotton organdie is cleverly kept and simulated and the fabric is grand for evening frocks. It is being used in fascinating prints and in this form is being promoted for formal as well as informal wear, and very charming it is, too, young and refreshing.

For informal evening wear as well as for more gala occasions, a frock of printed or silk organdie with simple bodice and long, graceful skirt worn with a little fited jacket will prove to be one of the coming season's major successes, if the number of models of this type that have already been purchased is any criterian. Buyers from home have purchased several ensembles of this type, as it is thought they will go well for our roofs and country clubs, as well as for summer resort wear. Such a model will prove infinitely more useful than a really formal gown, as formal entertainments are becoming considerably less each season.

* * *

VERA BOREA continues to score triumphantly with her creations. Her new collection shows some fascinating clothes for summer evenings and are of the type that are wearable time and time again, always with success. This is quite evident from only a cursory glance at the ensemble shown on this page. The frock is in printed silk organdie plaided in a bold design of yellow, orange, brown and black. The bodice is flat and unadorned, with a rounding modest decolletage, the ideal design for a frock of this genre. The skirt reaches to the instep and is flaring. With the dress is worn a short, fitted jacket of chocolate-colored peau d'ange with a cired surface. This has an outstanding collar cut in points, with points on the cuffs of the very brief sleeves.

* * *

WORTH HAS BEEN leading in the suit field this season and the suit sketched shows how much originality has been put into every model. The material is black alpaca and the blouse is of white crepe and there are short straight elbow-length sleeves. The alpaca jacket has pointed epaulettes fastened down with square brass buttons. Revers are treated in similar fashion. The narrow belt is finished with a heavy gilt tassel. Two deep pleats at the side of the skirt are released from the hips down.

BANKING CRISIS SEEN UNDER CONTROL

Evidence Grows Indicating Credit Easing Work of Reserve Bearing Fruit

By MERRILL S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, April 30.—Sensitive observers of the economic situation should pay especial attention to growing evidence that the banking crisis under way since last summer is under control.

Preliminary evidence is beginning to accumulate indicating that the major credit easing operation of the Federal Reserve System is beginning [illegible]

Mr. Rukeyser

[illegible] this week for the first time since September, '30, except over Treasury financing periods, but the demand deposits of member banks, which naturally tend to move with bank loans from all cities, they are to a large extent derived, began to flatten out in March after seven months of precipitate decline and have recently advanced.

DEPOSITS GAIN

The average of deposits for the four weeks ending April 27 showing a gain of $51,000,000, turned upward for the first time since the middle of last summer.

If this change of trend persists it may have far-reaching effects on business and finance. Continuation of the new trend would mean that industry, trade and commerce are to be relieved of the devastating effects of an acute credit crisis in which the total circulating medium of which bank deposits are the most important, has been shrinking at an alarmingly rapid rate.

Between July 22, 1931 and April 13, the average demand deposits in reporting member banks in big cities declined $2,525,000,000, or 18.6 per cent, at an average rate of decline of $81,000,000 a week.

ATTACK DEFLATION

Prior to last summer the readjustment was taking place in a more orderly manner. Since then the blizzard of deflation was proceeding at a dangerous rate which threatened the solvency of established institutions. The counter attack against deflation, including passage by Congress of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Glass-Steagall act, followed by the present aggressive campaign of the Federal Reserve system to enlarge the credit supply through open market purchases of government obligations appears to have ended the second phase, in which the benefits are beginning to percolate down to the customers of members for the first time.

In the circumstances the academic debate concerning inflation and deflation seems unrealistic. Financial Puritans attack any credit increase as "inflation" overlooking the fact that the increase is merely replacing credit which was destroyed as a result of mutual fears and panic among borrowers and lenders. Counter deflation under the limitations of the gold standard is not to be confused with pathological inflation, and is certainly different in kind from uncontrolled fiat money inflation such as Europe indulged in during and after the war.

The great economic evil is neither inflation nor deflation as such, but credit instability. The goal should be credit stabilization—not inflation which relieves debtors and penalizes the thrifty, nor deflation which transfers real wealth from the borrowing to the lending classes. Scientific management of credit would limit expansion to the actual growing needs of business.

The riotous deflation was the counter part of the earlier chapter of reckless credit expansion (both in quantity and from the standpoint of velocity of turnover). The country has suffered because in years of optimism the banks were too easy with lenders, whereas of late they have become too stern. Commercial bankers who proved suckers in lending abroad became tyrants at home. Scientific bankers would not veer from overoptimism to excessive pessimism; they would always remain objective, disinterested appraisers of the ability to pay of business men.

TARIFFS RAISE NEW TRADE PROBLEMS

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Will Seek Means to Meet Difficulties of Business

WASHINGTON, April 30.—(AP.)—New foreign trade problems that have grown out of the existing world business crisis will enter prominently into the program at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at San Francisco next month.

The subject will be considered at a special group session. Among the topics listed for discussion are such questions as foreign tariff barriers to United States exports, the effects of depreciated currencies and exchange restrictions on American trade, buy at home campaigns in relation to this country's export and import trade, and what American Chambers of Commerce abroad can contribute to the nation's trade recovery.

BARRIERS MULTIPLIED

Under the heading of these general subjects exporters and importers attending the convention will be given ample opportunity to discuss other current problems in the foreign trade field.

Commenting upon this particular phase of the impending meeting, Silas H. Strawn, president of the National Chamber, said:

"The last year witnessed a multiplication of the barriers in the way of our export trade. In individual foreign countries, as available business became limited, not only higher tariff levels but also quotas, exchange restrictions, limitation of buying to national products, and other schemes were employed to conserve business for home producers and to strengthen the financial and industrial position of nations. Depreciations of foreign currencies affected both our import and export trade, and reacted upon some of our domestic business.

TO DISCUSS BARGAINING

"The factors encompassed in our import and export trade problems bear upon the relationship of every American company to world markets and competition. And they include influences of vital concern to our domestic producers."

An effort will be made in this connection to determine whether the United States should institute tariff bargaining with foreign nations or whether this government should adopt some of the trade protective practices of foreign nations, it was indicated.

FOREIGN TRADE ANALYSIS

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Finished manufactures and crude materials combined dominated United States exportations during the first quarter of 1932 on the basis of an analysis by the Commerce Department.

Separately these two groups accounted for 38.6 and 34 per cent of the total trade during the quarter, having respective values of $173,348,000 and $152,712,000. Semi-manufactures stood third on the list, the total for this group amounting to $55,456 and accounting for 12.3 per cent of the total. Manufactured foodstuffs exported had a value of $42,941, equal to 9.5 per cent of the whole, while crude foodstuffs were valued at $25,197 or 5.6 per cent of the total export trade.

Crude materials led all imports into the United States during the period, their total value of $111,463,000 amounting to 28 per cent of the total. Finished manufactures incoming were valued at $97,161,000 or 24.4 per cent; crude foodstuffs $71,155,000 or 17.9 per cent; semi-manufactures $70,768,000 or 17.8 per cent, while manufactured food stuffs incoming were valued at $47,283,000 or 11.9 per cent of the total importations.

MARKETING ACT UNDER FIRE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 30.—(AP.)—W. L. Clayton, of Houston, Tex., nationally-known cotton factor, yesterday attacked what he termed government interference in the cotton industry in an address to the American Cotton Shippers Association. He said:

"The cotton trade properly denounces the agricultural marketing act as being extremely unsound and un-American, but how many of us realize that the agricultural marketing act and the Federal Farm Board are legitimate progeny of the tariff?"

He said the three were joint causes of a 68 per cent shrinkage in American exports for the first three months of 1932 as compared with the same period in 1929.

Farm Price Index Continues Decline

WASHINGTON, April 30.—(AP.)—The farm price index of the Department of Agriculture declined to 59 per cent of the pre-war level on April 15, from 61 per cent on March 15, and 91 per cent on April 15, 1931. The decline was general for all farm products, except fruits and vegetables.

STEEL OUTPUT LIKELY TO EXPAND

Probabilities Favor Gain Following Three Weeks of Production at 21% Rate

By B. E. V. LUTY.

For the third successive week steel production has been at about 21 per cent. It is very unusual for steel production to be stationary for any length of time, and chiefly perhaps on that account the trade expects a trend to set in within the next couple weeks, with a balance of probability that the trend will be upward.

Promising factors are the improved banking and financial conditions generally, the absence thus far of any real seasonal gain in steel demand and the certainty that the Ford Motor Company will require much more steel than the very limited quantities taken thus far. The only really unfavorable point is the fact that in ordinary times steel demand has diminished during May and June. Thus there is the question whether in these very unusual times the usual course will be followed.

PRICE TEST NEXT WEEK

The stabilized steel market will begin undergoing the last of its various tests next week, as this week ends the period in which deliveries would be made on specifications filed during first quarter on contracts.

Of late the automobile industry has been using close to 20 per cent of the steel made, the tin plate industry about 10 per cent, an unusually high proportion, and structural fabricating slightly under 10 per cent, its usual proportion, while the railroads have been taking very little against 15 to 25 per cent in the five years through 1929. The four lines account for no more than 40 per cent, leaving 60 per cent for all other demand, being highly diversified but light all around.

Fabricated structural steel lettings have averaged somewhat lighter in the last four weeks than earlier in the year, but a large amount of new work has been coming out.

STILL SILENT ON WAGES

The trade was somewhat disappointed that no statement as to salaries and wages was made after the Steel Corporation directors meeting Tuesday. As the corporation has made only one salary reduction while the majority of independents have made several, a second salary reduction is more or less expected, but opinion is divided as to wages. The only general reduction has been that of 10 per cent last October. With steel companies it is now a matter of conserving cash. The rather large inventory the Steel Corporation had at the close of last year, over $200,000,000, is likely to be reduced.

There is almost no scrap market in the Pittsburgh district, some short orders having been in a state of suspense while others have been completed and scrap from distant points is being offered at below the recent market.

WEATHER AIDS RETAIL SALES

Business conditions in this district have shown comparatively little change in general, Dun's weekly review says. More seasonable weather has brought a slight increase in the volume of sales of men's and women's wearing apparel, including millinery and shoes.

The dollar value of sales, however, is materially lower than a year ago, due to the low prices prevailing. There has been a slight improvement in light hardware, farm implements and garden tools, but heavy hardware is moving slowly. There is comparatively little construction work in progress and lumber and other building materials continue to move slowly. There has been a fairly good volume of business in automobile accessories, but automobile dealers report sales still below normal.

There has been no improvement in the collection situation, the average continuing slow.

Stocks Decline — Local Fuels Steady

STOCK PRICES SINK QUIETLY TO LOWS

Steel Holds Fairly Steady But Other Leaders Show Losses of Point or So

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP.)—The stock market sank quietly into new low ground for the major bear cycle in the early dealings today, although offerings were light.

United States Steel held fairly steady, but issues off a point or so during the first half hour included Air Reduction, Santa Fe, United States Steel prefered, Woolworth, and Norfolk and Western, while fractional declines appeared in American Can, American Telephone, Sears Roebuck, Eastman and others.

Wall street market commentators derived some satisfaction out of the weekly merchandising reviews, which stated that recent gains in retail trade were being retained. In particular the assertion that steel trade prospects were a little brighter was well received.

A gain of 1,541 units in March automobile production over the February schedules was in keeping with expectations. What was regarded by industrial executives as more important is whether the industry will now go ahead with its expansion. May production schedules are expected to be higher.

Continued reports of foreign dumping of commodities exerted a somewhat depressing effect. Particularly emphatic was the statement of a Tennessee corporation official who forecast hardship in the western mining states unless foreign pressure on domestic price levels is relieved.

Evidence that the operating companies in the American public utility field are coming through the present period of reduced earnings in relatively good shape was furnished in the United Gas Improvement Company report. This report showed for the year ended March 31 last that earnings were only 10 cents a share less than in the preceding year.

Westinghouse's report showing a gain of 50 per cent in first quarter orders over last year was favorably received.

Sterling opened unchanged at $3.65¾ for cables.

Jersey Likely to Adjust Extra Dividend at Monday's Meeting

The next important dividend meeting will be held on Monday, when directors of Standard Oil of New Jersey are slated to act on the payment due at this time. The company's 1931 report, still to be published, is expected to make a poor showing, due in no small measure to continuation of the policy of making heavy charges against earnings. The company reported $1.65 a share earned for 1932, but current estimates indicated that net last year probably fell considerably short of that figure. The company is strong financially, however, and though there has been considerable discussion of the dividend question recently, anxiety seems to have lessened with the approach of the meeting date. Yet some adjustments of the extra would not prove surprising.

Renewed selling of Atchison carried that stock to a new low at the start today. Weakness was accompanied by more open discussion of the outlook for further dividend payments on the road's common stock, and opinion seemed to be that the outlook is not particularly bright. The next meeting is not due until July, but early this month when the board ordered a dividend of $1 a share against the $1.50 payment voted in January, it was stated that "continuance of dividends on the common stock must depend upon an improvement in the corporation's earnings." Figures for the first three months show such improvement lacking.

Loew's Inc for the first half of its fiscal year will show a net profit more than sufficient to cover the full year's regular dividend requirements on its common stock now on a $3 annual basis. This is after usual deductions for depreciation and other charges, and is also after converting all of its foreign exchange into dollars. Foreign profits have not been simply written down to market but have actually been transferred to New York, avoiding the possibility of further depreciation.

A few earnings reports for the first quarter have been encouraging although in general the showings have reflected the substantial decline in business. The showing of Standard Brands for the quarter with net income at 30 cents a share, the same as for the like 1931 quarter despite an increase in number of shares outstanding, is one of the best made so far. Particular attention was attracted by the estimate that Safeway Stores for the first quarter had net equal in the neighborhood of $1.25 a share, about double that for the like 1931 period.

Deposits of equipments of Seaboard Air Line Railroad under the plan of exchange formulated by the receivers to take care of the road's requirements until 1935, is progressing favorably. It is understood that nearly the required 76 per cent of principal amount of several series have been turned in. Another requisite to operation of the plan is the consent of the underlying bondholders committee to postponement of any foreclosure actions until February 1, 1935, when the new certificates mature. This consent, it is understood, will be forthcoming.

Brokers feel that the unfavorable news of the week has brought some compensations. No longer will the financial community have to worry over what might happen to the dividends on U. S. Steel common and Pennsylvania Railroad, and it can hope that with even a slight upturn in business, second-quarter earnings statements will show measurable improvement over those for the first three months of the year.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

(During illness of Mr. Winchell, this column is being conducted by Paul Yawitz.)

Portrait of Another Young Man Talking to Himself!

I no longer believe that the smile on a cripple's face is a protective veneer. . . And that down deep in his soul he harbors spite and resentment against the able-bodied. . . It was short-sightedness on my part ever to have believed it. . . There's Connie Boswell, for instance. . . The tender-voiced invalid member of the crooning Boswell Sisters. . . She spent a valuable afternoon waiting on 72nd St. and Broadway that Jimmy Palmer, the crippled newsboy, might not be disappointed. . . For weeks he had asked me to make it possible for him to meet his favorite radio goddess. . . . "It will mean so much to me, Mr. Yawitz," he would say. . . Jimmy is 27 years old. . . And for 17 years infantile paralysis has left him with pony underpinnings, a curved spine and a set of crutches that spread across the floor like the broken wings of an eagle. . . So that incorrigible secy of mine columned a note to the effect that Jimmy wanted to meet Connie. . . And the next day two of the little star's representatives called to tell me she, too, was anxious to see the boy. . . But Connie couldn't wait for her agents or for me to plot the meeting. . . She went herself.

She made no appeal for publicity. . . The allegedly inevitable line-up of newsreel men was absent. . . Nor were reporters invited to the scene to perform their hullabaloo antics. . . It was just a great lady who had risen from the trivia of small-town ado to a national fireside fame coming to exchange a smile of sympathy. . . With an unknown newsie at his corner hutch. . . When she arrived, Jimmy was not there. . . So she ordered her chauffeur to park and wait. . . Two whole hours went by before Jimmy appeared. . . It was a great surprise. . . He hadn't even had time to don his holiday suit and the red-striped scarf. . . But the thrill was greater than if a doctor had suddenly told him his warped body could be straightened. . . In the back seat of her sedan, they talked and talked. . . I don't know what they said and I didn't have the nerve to ask. . . But I imagine Jimmy was just a trifle awed at first. . . And stuttered and stuttered just as I would have done. . . After a while the host invited the most famous guest his stand will ever boast into a nearby soda fountain. . . And they drank malted milks. . . "With a lot of whipped cream on top," he told me. . . And Connie invited the lad to see her again at her home. . . And she inscribed to a really wonderful boy on a photo. . . In less than two hours Jimmy had it framed and proudly displayed on the edge of his magazine rack.

Jimmy waited up till 5:15 in the morning to catch me on my homeward trek. . . "I gotta thank you," he said. "I met Connie and we talked about things the ordinary person doesn't understand. . . It was great!" . . . Jimmy's sort of a different man today. . . Five years ago he wandered into a Chinese restaurant on Third Ave. and met a taxi dance-hall hostess. . . She had been Eye-Gazing with a hack-driver whose love meter was checking up on a new fare. . . Jimmy paid for her chow mein and hobbled her to the door. . . Inside of a month they were married. . . "I appreciated having someone with a strong pair of legs care for me," was his summation. . . She was a pretty girl with dark hair and a pair of blue eyes that laughed courageously at those who couldn't understand the marriage. . . Life was a joyous epic to Jimmy. He sold more papers than the larger stands in the neighborhood. . . He was rightfully proud of his wife. . . Then suddenly one day she left. . . There was a note in his room. . . There always is a note. . . But this one was pinned to one of his old crutches. . . She wanted to make certain he would see it. . . "I became so mean after that," he said, "that people refused to buy papers from me. . . I barked at everyone who had a normal body. . . I didn't care much what they thought. . . One day a fellow resented my insult and told me so. . . I jumped at him and fell into the gutter. . . So he picked me up and I felt ashamed."

In two weeks she was back. . . Jimmy gave her money and helped get her a job, but he wouldn't take her back. . . "It hurt too much. . . There are quite a number of handsome gentlemen in Little Bold New York who have had similar experiences. . . Fellows with hard legs and spines as straight as a London bobby's. . . At any rate, I'd like to tell Connie that she did me a great favor. . . And also that she infused a new constellation into the little universe of 72nd St. and Broadway. . . Today the whole neighborhood is congratulating the Man Who Knows Connie Boswell.

That's an interesting story about Luigi Barzini, the editor. . . He came here 6 yrs. ago and made a tabloid of the Italian Corriere. . . In Italy his fame spread. . . And they paraded in the streets of Naples in honor of the local boy making good in the big country. . . Then Mussolini heard about him and invited him to come back to Italy and bring American ideas with him. . . So Barzini wound up his affairs and re-entered his native land to the huzzahs of the populace. . . He was given charge of the Naples Mattino, the most famous daily in the peninsula. . . The first thing he did was to make the news brief. . . And to eliminate the traditional "third page" on which appeared the learned comments of the highbrows. . . Give the readers news' was the prime purpose of his regime. . . And in a few months the populace rebelled. . . They accused him of Americanizing their journalism. . . And according to a cable I received today, Barzini is on the way out. . . for doing just what they had asked him to do.

It always puzzles me that city ordinance that prohibits women from working as waitresses or cashiers after midnight. . . And yet, does nothing about the hat-check girls, the dance hall hostesses and the women taxi-drivers. . . There should be an explanation. . . And now the first Sandwich Sign Girl makes her appearance. . . That's what the depression is doing. . . I saw her parading the virtues of a beauty-parlor—of all things!—as she pounded the 42nd St. pavements. . . She was a sprightly lass with a chilled expression. . . It sort of said: "Yes, but what of it?" And I couldn't think of an answer. . . I doubt if there is one. . . And while we're on the depression, Tom Patterson, the art-dealer, was asked by a friend how he felt after his recent operation. . . "Okay, but I think the other was cut," he replied. . . That flood of letters (180 to date) protesting the Little Red Book's statement that Ely Culbertson's two children never saw a deck of cards all contained clippings from a current mag. . . And they're all pictures of little Bruce and Joyce sitting on the floor playing bridge. . . Was I wrong, or is it trick photography?

Faith Works Miracles In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Whether you like the picture in the Penn theater this week depends on how much faith you have up your sleeve. It is the one-time hit of the silent screen.

Mr. Seibel

The Miracle Man," in which Tommy Meighan and Lon Chaney came across. Now the emphasis has been put on Sylvia Sidney and Chester Morris who are a pair of pickpockets and crooks. In the course of the picture they are converted from their evil ways and Sylvia, who started out with a rum bottle, throws away a cigarette just before the final fadeout. Chester is somewhat harder boiled, but he too succumbs to the spell of the Miracle Man or Patriarch. Irving Pichel is a wicked village atheist, also addicted to rum, and of course he has a little lame boy who beats him in argument by asking if God made sparrows, which living can't answer. The little lame theologian is Bobby Coogan and he is as lovable and wholesome as if his father had been one of the elect. Then there is John Wray in the old Chaney role of the Frog, which he plays with much realism.

The crooks go to the village where the Patriarch performs his miracles on a small scale and then turn it into a big show, extracting checks for thousands from all who come to be cured. But the Patriarch spoils the game by converting the crooks—after which he dies peacefully, with Booby Coogan romping about and the Frog ready to help in building a chapel in which the atheistic Pichel will probably preach.

It is a very well made picture, with some fine seascapes and good character acting. In the stage show that classic clown Jimmy Savo played his tricks and winked the other eye as he taught the orchestra a new tune. There is also good dancing and more clever comedy in the bill, with the Chester Hale Girls well drilled and dressed as usual and sympathy is due to Lois Miller, who sings and plays so well and has some songs with neither grammar nor sense. As long as the word "love" is in it, it's supposed to be a popular song.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 30.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The Congressman that suggested cutting government aviator's salary to help balance their overspent budget didn't get far with his bill; in fact, he wasn't able to "take off" and leave the ground with it. Taxpayers know that an aviator risks his life every day, and a politician only on November fourth, every four years.

The other day Mr. Henry Ford visited Mr. Hoover and told him that what the country needed was a "new eight" and a garden. Most people got no room for a garden so what Mr. Ford will do is put out a car with a garden in it; then you hoe as you go.

Yours, WILL.

BITS OF LIFE
All in a Day
By Mark Hellinger

Pony Boy.

THE STORY of the bank cashier who turned to the ponies for a little excitement is as old as the first horse. Or the first bank, as the case may be. You've probably heard a thousand variations. The poor sap borrows from the bank's funds, places plenty on a sure thing and expects to return the dough from the profits after the nag has breezed home. To my knowledge, however, the sure thing has never won.

But what if it did? Suppose, for a distinct change, the pony waltzed in by 20 blocks. Would the poor but dishonest cashier quit at that point and live contentedly on his winnings? Would he thank his stars for his escape from jail and be a good boy to his mother from that day on? Ah, my friends, those are two very excellent questions indeed. And they lead us directly into their alleged yarn for today.

As Stanleigh Freborg can tell you, John Jones was a model young man. As a cashier in one of the biggest banks in town, John was duly appreciative of the importance of his position. He brushed his teeth every morning, walked 20 blocks each day for his health, tipped his barber 10 cents with amazing regularity and never struck a lady without first removing his hat.

When it came to honesty, our hero couldn't be topped. He was so honest that it was just a little disgusting.

But the twists that life takes are sometimes very strange. At any rate, I want you to step right up and shake hands with Charlie Smith, the twist in the life of our model cashier.

Charlie was no silver lining for anybody's cloud. He was a small time gambler and race tipster, and he was fully as crooked as our hero was honest. To hear him talk, there was no one he didn't know and nothing he couldn't do.

It is most unfortunate that I am compelled to toss our cashier and Charlie together, but what is a poor columnist to do? They met at one of those parties in one of those apartments. And before the evening was over Charlie Smith had John Jones in a corner. What was worse, he was whispering things. Let's step behind them for a moment.

John: Charlie was saying, "I've never met a guy that I liked more than I do you. One look at your map and anybody would know that you're strictly a regular guy."

He looked around the room. "I'm going to tell you something," he went on, "and I know you won't let out a peep to nobody. These people at this party don't think as much of me as they might. And do you know why? It's because I'm not in the big dough at the present moment."

"I think you're mistaken," observed our hero. "Nobody feels that——"

"That's where you're on the wrong foot," interrupted Charlie confidently. "I can sense things. All my life I've been sensing things. I know about people by looking in their eyes, and these mugs ain't fooling me. But I'm going to let you in on something that's gonna surprise you. This is Monday night. On Friday night everybody in this room will be telling me that I'm the greatest guy in the world."

His voice grew even lower.

"And do you know why?" I got a horse going on Friday that's an absolute sure thing. The whole race is fixed and there isn't a chance in a million that anything can go wrong. I've been around the tracks all my life and this is the one killing I've been waiting for.

"I'm putting every cent I can get together on that nag's back. The odds will be plenty juicy because there's no chance for the information to leak out. And when I meet this mob after I've made my pile on that one race, just watch the difference in their attitudes. I'll be in the big dough, John Jones. And when you're rolling in coin, you'd be surprised how many smiles are tossed your way."

We'll stand behind them just long enough to see John fiddle nervously with his collar and to hear him say: "Are you sure, Charlie, that the horse can't lose?" And then we'll steal silently away. Because we both know what's going to happen and there isn't much use of continuing with such sad dialogue.

On Tuesday, John and Charlie had luncheon together. Their conversation was much the same with the exception of the fact that Charlie was even more positive than he had been the night before. On Wednesday, John was begging for the name of the horse. On Thursday, he walked from the bank with $5,000 of the bank's dough in his pocket.

After all, he figured, what could he lose? The horse would win on Friday—the money would be back in the bank on Saturday morning. Charlie was so completely positive that nothing could go wrong. And if Charlie didn't know about horses, who did?

It was all so very simple. It wasn't really stealing; it was just borrowing. And the prospects were so tempting. Charlie had assured him that the horse would pay at least 20 to 1. Why, he'd be the owner of $100,000! Yes, indeed.

John Jones turned the money over to Charlie that evening. And Charlie handed him a few comforting words in return.

"The horse's name is Claptrap," he murmured, "and you're gonna be the happiest man in America when you get the result of the fifth race tomorrow. I couldn't raise as much as you did, I was only able to dig up $3,000. But that ain't bad. I ought to clean up at least 60 grand for myself.

"I'll spread our dough around the track tomorrow as soon as the books are opened. Good luck to you, partner. We'll meet at Tony's as soon as I can get back from the track."

Thus far, then, the story is exactly as I outlined it to you in my first paragraph. No novelty to it whatsoever. But here's the break.

Claptrap won the race! Yes, my pals. He walked in at the magnificent odds of 25-to-1. John Jones immediately became one of the most unusual characters in the history of fiction. He was a bank cashier who had bet on a sure thing. And the sure thing had actually won!

Remember, if you will, that John was really an honest young man. This was the one lapse in a life of duty and decency. There would never be another. He had just won $125,000. Because he had won there was now no chance of anything going wrong. He would again return to his life of honesty. Do you follow me?

I hope you do, because I'm having a little difficulty in following myself. It seems that Charlie, figuring that the horse didn't have a chance, merely kept the money in his pocket. He disappeared from town the next day.

And John Jones, the only cashier ever to win a sure thing bet, went to jail, anyhow!

Love and Logs In Davis

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Logs and love are intermixed in Carnival Boat," a lively realistic picture of life in a big timber camp, showing on the Davis screen. It would be interesting if for no other reason than authentic views of the actual methods of getting out logs in the northwestern forests to feed saws of a great mill. The title is from the fact that a river showboat visits the camp to entertain the boys, but logging is the backbone of the picture, and the action is rapid. A runaway log train furnishes a thrill, and the dynamiting of a dam gate to relieve a log jam brings more pulse-jumps.

Bill Boyd is a lumberjack and Ginger Rogers is the big boy's sweetheart from the carnival boat. Fred Kohler is Bill's false friend, who wants to step into the logging foreman's shoes worn by Hobart Bosworth, who naturally desires to bequeath them to his son, Bill. The matter is complicated by the fact that the old foreman doesn't like showboats, nor anybody on them, even as cute a lass as Ginger. Yet it all works out just as that little imp, Cupid, would have it, but not before Bill gives Kohler a fine trouncing in true woodsman style.

Of course, there has to be comedy, and it is supplied by Edgar Kennedy and Harry Sweet, as a couple of dumb tree-fellers, with Edgar the dumber of the two. Marie Prevost is in it, too, as a carnival boat girl.

A Battle Among Democrats Isn't Mere Family Row

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

NEW YORK, April 30.

Al Smith and Franklin Roosevelt are fighting a terrific battle to see who's going to be queen of the May.

Al took Massachusetts while Frank grabbed Pennsylvania in the Democratic primaries.

In Pennsylvania all the Democrats hold are primaries. They're still on first base in November.

Why all these terrific preliminaries in April when we still have to spend July and August smacking grasshoppers and praying for rain?

Why don't the Democrats grab a leaf from the Republican tobacco crop and learn something? The Republicans conserve their strength by agreeing with one another even when they're wrong. Which is most of the time.

If the G. O. P. eliminates somebody from the tournament it ain't going to be a Republican. But the Demmies kick each other all over a forty-acre lot with an option on another forty.

If there's an argument in the G. O. P. it's a family secret. The same situation in the Democratic nest is a national hook-up.

Fleet Action In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

A magnificent picture of the Pacific fleet "capturing" San Francisco with dreadnaughts, destroyers, submarines, airplanes and other units, entering the Golden Gate, is contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. There is a thrilling description by the Globe Trotter. No more awe-inspiring pictures of the might of Uncle Sam's Pacific unit have ever been made. They include views from the air as well as from the ships themselves. Ninety-one vessels take part in the maneuvers.

Capt. Schneider, famous German lion trainer, finds himself and his 61 lions stranded in Naples, where he is forced to sell all his animals, including the largest collection of lions ever assembled. A great crowd gathers at the auction sale, but there are few bidders and no one will give as high as $20,000, the minimum price for the whole lot.

AUCTIONEER DISCREET

The actioneer discretely remains outside the cage, but Capt. Schneider enters and puts his lions through their paces. As though objecting to the proceedings they start a thrilling battle, but Schneider scatters them like chaff.

President Hoover is seen and heard as he appears before the Governors' Conference in Richmond, Va., with his plea for reduced budgets and readjustment of taxation burdens.

Illustrated by maps and diagrams the result of the Literary Digest's prohibition poll is announced by one of the editors. It shows that out of more than 4,000,000 votes, 73 per cent favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and 27 per cent favor its continuance. Of all the states only Kansas and North Carolina show a dry majority.

RIDE 'EM, COWBOY!

Out in Wyoming cowboys are getting ready to entertain summer tourists with broncho busting rodeos. The pictures show many thrilling scenes during the rehearsal.

It may or may not be wrestling, but Jim McMillen, of Chicago and Andy Zaharoff, of Russia, put on a sensational bout in the modern manner in the New York Coliseum. The men slug, kick and do everything but bite each other. McMillen finally succeeds in pinning his opponent's shoulders to the floor.

Scenes of Spain's celebration of the first anniversary of the Republic show President Zamora attending the opening of the gardens of the Royal Palace in Madrid. There are impressive pictures of a military parade reviewed by the President.

Talker!

Hal Skelley has a leading role in "The Struggle," D. W. Griffith picture, opening today in the Harris.

Human Play In Warner

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Symphony of Six Million" opened yesterday in the Warner. It is poignant human drama.

Fannie Hurst wrote the story, putting a heart-beat into every word. And the movie-makers, spreading it on the screen, have wrung every pulsing throb from the manuscript.

The theme is that of an East Side boy, who becomes a successful physician. He's an idealist, and he has dedicated his life to the sick and the helpless of his own boyhood environment. But other influences sway him. He moves to fashionable Park avenue, becomes a doctor to wealthy ladies. He wins riches and fame. And magazines feature photographs of his hands, calling them "million dollar hands."

But those hands are unable to save his own father when they are called upon to perform a serious operation. After that, the doctor loses confidence in himself. Eventually, though, love and faith lead him back to happiness and his old ideals of service.

Ricardo Cortez has the doctor role. His performance is worthy, sympathetic and sincere. Irene Dunne is effective in the leading feminine role. And a large supporting cast is capable throughout.

Stanley Has Whiteman; Gay Gals

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The Stanley screen has three gold-diggers on the loose in "The Greeks Had a Word for Them," and on the stage is Paul Whiteman and his gang of syncopators.

Mr. Whiteman, a shadow of his former self in an avoirdupois way, puts up a good show. He sends his band through the tunes and permits the spotlight to feature a lot of individual talent, including Mildred Bailey, popular radio singer.

"Melodies bring memories" sings Miss Bailey, as she enters into a happy repertoire. She offers "I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal You," "Sleepy Time Down South," "Little Joe" and "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone." Still the audience applauds for more, and she continues: "Old Rockin Chair—That's Me" and this threatens to stop the show: "Minnie the Moocher" and "River Stay 'Way From My Door."

Mr. Whiteman also presents, among numerous others, a young fellow who is a radio show in himself. He's a clever impersonator. He does an Amos 'n' Andy with all the trimmings, and he's Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie besides.

Yes sir, there's plenty of talent to that Whiteman organization. And it's not a bit high-hat. I even consents to be a German band for the laughs.

Getting back to the screen, it's a safe bet that the Greeks may have had a "word" for them, but if such gay ladies were running about in Socrates' day he probably would have thrown his philosophy books out the window and gone cabaret-ing. The picture, based on Zoe Akins' play, is a zippy comedy, even though the movie censors may have taken out some of the zip.

Ina Claire is at her best in this one and those two other girls of the gold-digging trio, Joan Blondell and Madge Evans, aren't far behind. These gals are pals until a big sugar and shekel daddy loom on the scene and then it's a free-for-all. And may the fastest worker get him.

However, it does go puritan at the finale, with the nice Davy Manners giving the romance a touch of nicety.

-:- Plays and Players -:-

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Hay Fever" season in the Alvin will be at an earlier date than that of the regular sneeze period, but the Hay Fever in the Sixth street theater will be fun instead of annoyance. It is a comedy by Noel Coward and would have been here even earlier than the date now set, May 9, had not its star, Constance Collier, become ill. Miss Collier will be in it again when it arrives. The boys will be in the box office Monday to take care of customers for this the play that ends the Professional Players' series.

* * *

Wednesday night in the Nixon there will be a performance of "Such Is Life," a modern drama of New York that was one of the successes of the Misha and Lucy German Folk Theater in New York this theatrical year. The original company will be seen here with Misha and Lucy German as stars and Menashe Skulnik as featured comedian.

* * *

When "The Mikado" is played in the Nixon as the final offering in the week of Gilbert and Sullivan that is to open in that theater Monday, May 16, there will be seen a real Japanese in the character of Yum Yum. This charming person will be personified by Hizi Koyke, Japanese prima donna whose reputation is international. The Civic Light Opera Company, of which Milton Aborn is managing director, will offer four G. & S. works during the week.

"When a Feller Needs a Friend," in which Jackie Cooper and Chic Sale are co-featured, has just had its world premiere in Baltimore, and the motion picture critics of that city were unanimous in praising it as the best of all Jackie Cooper pictures. The Baltimore Sun states:

"Of all the pictures designed to please children and adults alike by the dramatization of those elements of childhood which have a universal appeal, this is the most satisfactory."

* * *

Mitzi Green is winding up a vaudeville tour and is preparing to return to Hollywood and pictures.

The Theater Club's annual gold medal for the best play of the year was awarded to Elmer Rice for his "Counsellor-at-Law." Mrs. Rice receiving in place of her husband, who is in Russia. . . . Joe Cook has gone to England, where he will play "the provinces," opening May 8. . . . Philip Merivale, star of "Cynara," one of the few dramatic hits of the New York season, is on the books to sail for England and vacation today.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Levinsky Eliminated. — Old Floor Stars Coming.
Break for Bleacherites. — Change in Trackers.
Baer Turns New Leaf. — Test of Derby Racers.

WALKER WINS PLACE IN HEAVY RATING

EVEN AFTER HE had defeated Tommy Loughran and outfought Jack Dempsey, King Levinsky was not conceded a rating as a possible heavyweight championship contender by Pittsburgh fans who had witnessed his unimpressive showing against Emmett Rocco at Motor Square Garden last April, and their judgment was borne out by the defeat of Levinsky last night at the hands of Mickey Walker in Chicago. If he can't beat an opponent who is little more than a middleweight, he surely has no business among the big boys in the title circle.

King Levinsky

But where Levinsky goes out, Walker comes in, By holding Sharkey to a draw and fighting his way to a 10-round decision over Levinsky, after being knocked down right off the reel, Mickey has earned a place in the heavyweight reckoning. He'll have to be counted in there somewhere for a trial, at least. Giving away 23 pounds and thrashing heavyweights when nearing the age of 32, after a career that has not been a model of careful living, by any means, makes Mickey stand out more prominently than ever as one of the greatest fighters of any period.

QUITE A NOTABLE new feature was written into Pittsburgh's sports history last evening with the dedication of Greenlee Field, home of Gus Greenlee's Pittsburgh Crawfords, in Bedford avenue. Ideal weather, a large attendance and a great 1-to-0 game provided a perfect setting for the official opening of the fine stadium.

Greenlee Field, marking another step in the city's sport progress, is destined to play a prominent part in athletics hereabouts, being suited not only for baseball, but for boxing and other games. It is one of the finest independent plants in the country, and a lasting credit to the builder and the city.

AS ONE OBSERVER remarks, baseball sentimentalists gush over the poor bleacherite as the very backbone of the grand old game, and then proceed to see that the best he gets is the worst of it.

He swelters in the heat and shivers in the cold, enduring the bodily discomfort out of love for the sport when he hasn't got the price of a better seat. When the bleacher space is limited he can't go at all, and nobody gives him a tumble or makes a move to help him.

BUT BROOKLYN IS one club that has finally seen the light and taken steps to give the four-bit fan a break. Until now the capacity of the 50-cent bleacher section in the upper tier of the center field stand at the Dodgers' grounds has been only 634, but the club owners have decided to increase it for the benefit of the many who cannot afford to pay more, and beginning with the double-header against the Braves tomorrow 3,500 sets will hereafter be available at Ebbets Field at 50 cents a copy. It is one of the most commendable moves made in baseball in a long, long time.

Max Baer

MAX BAER'S improvement as a fighter is said to be due largely to the turning over of a new leaf. The former playboy and circus horse has turned preacher at 23, deploring extravagant living and the loose fighting for which he was once notorious. "I get hit often enough without doing that any more, he says.

Three years ago, Paul Lowry recollects, Baer was working on a farm for $3 a day. When he began to make thousands as a fighter he threw his money away. Ancil Hoffman bought part of his contract for $5,000. Baer spent it in three days. He has had three big automobiles and as many chauffeurs, plus a secretary. When he married nine months ago, he bought a $26,000 home and $16,000 worth of furniture. He and his wife separated, and the home and furniture went back to the original owners. Max got $5,000 for the Swiderski fight this week. He says he's saving from now on.

THE REUNION AND banquet of this district's old-timers in basketball, to be held next Tuesday evening at Webster Hall, will be attended by many of the once famous floor stars of other years from the East, as well as the leaders in this section.

Harry Hough, the greatest of all, is coming from Trenton, and other players who thrilled Central League fans 25 years ago also will be on hand. One of the latest to announce his intended coming is Frank Morganweck, of Egg Harbor, N. J., called the father of pro basketball and who was a manager and coach in the old Central loop. J. J. Freund, Jr., handling the arrangements, may be addressed at 225 Charles street, Pittsburgh (10), or reached by telephone Everglade 4297.

WALTER CHRISTIE, 60-year-old track coach, who has been dropped by the University of California after 32 seasons because his team was defeated by Stanford nine years in a row, says winning isn't the thing that counts. "I never got my greatest thrill out of a winning team," he remarked. "It was having my boys do the best they could. If every one of them gave all he had, I never bothered about the score. That was better than victory. The athletes of today are no better than those of other years. They have broken records right and left only because the conditions, facilities and coaching are better. But the limit is near in record-breaking."

CHRISTIE SEES IN modern trackers a diminishing love for their sport. He says that though they are handed everything on a silver platter, there isn't nearly the interest that the boys of old had, when they used to do their running and jumping in grain fields, in the streets, on bumpy lots. They considered it fun.

"It is harder to retain the interest of the present-day youth," the veteran coach added. "He doesn't want to work for success. It takes love of your event to become a track or field champion. How many boys of today will work for two hours at a stretch on step alone to perfect himself in the discus throw? That's what Eric Krenz did, and that's what made him a world beater."

THE WEIGHT OF the dope will continue to be against the success of a filly in the Kentucky Derby, which has been captured only once by a thoroughbred of that sex, but today brings something that should at least produce a better line on the chances of Top Flight, the favorite, than has yet been obtainable.

C. V. Whitney

For C. V. Whitney's great little filly, the 2-year-old champion of 1931 and undefeated in seven starts at that age, is to make her debut as a 3-year-old in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica this afternoon.

THOUGH THE DISTANCE, a mile and 70 yards, is 370 yards short of the Derby route, and the field to be met today does not include any entrants for the Kentucky classic, the conditions and the opposing group will be sufficiently tough to make the race a real test of Top Flight as possible winner at Churchill Downs. And while Top Flight is being tested at Jamaica today, Tick On, the colt picked as her most formidable rival in the Derby, will be undergoing a similar trial in the Chesapeake Stakes at Havre de Grace. Tick On was beaten a length by Springsteel in his first start as a 3-year-old last Tuesday, but that defeat was attributed to a poor ride by Jockey Pete Walls and today's event is likely to prove that Tick On still must be reckoned as having as good a chance in the Derby.

FORDHAM ACE SETS RECORD FOR 'CHASE

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—(AP.)—They can re-write that old ditty today under the new title of "Run 'em Down, McCluskey" and do no injustice whatever to the perseverance, sped and courage of one of America's foremost young Olympic athletic prospects.

With nearly 10,000 cheering him on, raven-thatched Joe McCluskey, pride of Fordham University and Manchester, Conn., picked himself off the turf and "ran 'em down" to win the 3,000-meter steeplechase, feature of the Penn relay carnival's opening day.

SET U. S. RECORD

This powerful youngster not only came from behind in sensational style after tumbling over an early barrier but covered the obstacle-strew route in the fastest time ever registered in this country, 9 minutes 28.6 seconds.

"It looks like McClusky's performance assures the United States a real chance to wrest steeplechase honors from the Finns this year for the first time," remarked Lawson Robertson, head coach of the American Olympic track and field team.

Otherwise, the big Penn carnival entered the final day's whirl of competition between East and Mid-West after a relatively mild assault upon existing records. The only other marks toppled yesterday were in the 400-meter hurdles, which Eugene Beatty, Negro star from Michigan Normal, won in 53.3 seconds; and the interscholastic medley, which went to Hamilton Collegiate Institute of Canada in the new record time of 7 minutes, 47.4 seconds.

In the absence of Barney Berlinger, who had won the event for three straight years for the University of Pennsylvania, the decathlon title was kept in the family by George Munger, another Penn all-around star.

MUNGER STRONG

Munger finished strong to overcome Joe Hall, of Florida, and two other rivals, Saxe, of Colgate, and Pohl, of Delaware, but the winner's total of 7,324 points did not menace Berlinger's carnival record or stamp Munger as an Olympic prospect now.

The principal relay winners yesterday and their performances: Intercollegiate quarter-mile, Ohio State, 42 seconds; sprint medley, Penn State, 3:28 3-5; distance medley, New York University, 10:21 3-5; interscholastic quarter-mile, Mercersburg Academy, Pa., 43 seconds; interscholastic medley, Hamilton Collegiate, Canada, 7:47 2-5.

DRAKE MARKS FALL

DES MOINES, IA., April 30.—(AP.)—Surviving stars in the annual Drake relays, with three new records already to their credit, were ready today to renew assaults on existing standards.

University of Indiana athletes, who broke an intercollegiate record of 17 years' standing in the distance medley relay yesterday, were after two more long range marks in today's finals.

The Hoosier medley quartet, with Martich and Neese running the 440 and 880-yard laps in the absence of Fuqua and Hornsbostel, who were injured in an auto accident, cracked the 17-year-old record by winning in 10:19.1. The old record was 10:20.

George Saling, the Iowa hurdle star, and John Brooks, a sophomore Negro from Chicago University, shared the honors as record breakers in the high hurdles and broad jump.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE KING OF NONCHALANCE—Charles Holbert, the "Nonchalant Fall Guy," is a building cleaner by trade. He was working at his calling on a scaffold off the fourteenth floor of the Union Trust Building in Cincinnati, on December 8, 1931, when his foot slipped, precipitating him 14 stories to the ground. One of the ropes upholding the scaffold, which Holbert managed to grab in a gloved hand, broke the force of the fall. He made a perfect three-point landing upon a coil of hemp. When Patrol No. 2 arrived in response to a frantic summons to take him to a hospital, Holbert, entirely unharmed, was puffing at a cigaret. He is an old hand at "falling," he said. On a previous occasion he had fallen from a yardarm 165 feet high onto a coal pile. Except for a few lumps of coal still imbedded in his back, the fall had no injurious consequences.

PIRATES LOSE FOURTH FRAY IN ROW

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

His club defeated four times in succession, Manager George Gibson, of the Pirates, this morning announced an important change in his battlefront. Gibby will bench Left Fielder Adam Comorosky in favor of Augustin Dugas, the French-Canadian recruit who led the American Association in batting last season.

"Either Dugas or Barbee will take Comorosky's place for the present," said Gibson. "If the Reds use a right-hander on the slab, Gus will be in action; in the event of the appearance of a southpaw, Barbee will play. Comorosky is a hard-working, conscientious boy, but I think a rest may have a good effect on him at this time. His slump certainly has hurt the club."

The fact that Manager Dan Howley has decided to send Red Lucas to the slab this afternoon in the third and final fight of the series means that Dugas will go to the left pasture. Gibby announced Bill Harris, Texas League graduate, as his slab choice.

BUCS NEED HURLERS

The Pittsburgh pilot admits he is in a quandary as to his flingers. His mood was reflected before yesterday's game, when a newspaperman asked him to name his pitcher for today.

"Gee, it's tough to pick tomorrow's pitcher," said Gibby; "I don't even know who will pitch the fourth inning today."

The Reds were outhit by the Pirates yesterday, but that doesn't mean much when you can show more runs than the other club at the end of nine innings. The Pirates piled up 13 safeties as against seven for the Howley crew, many of the home blows being wasted. The Rhinelanders copped the fight, 6 to 4, and thus made it four out of five in the season's play of the two teams.

Bill Swift, relief hurler for the Buccos, was the big star of the battle. Ervin Brame was given another bad trimming in the early rounds, leaving the scene at the end of three innings with the invaders in possession of five tallies. Swift went to Fogarty Knoll at the start of the fourth and through five rounds he held the hard hitters to one scratch hit and a very scarchy run.

Eppa Rixey, slab winner in the second game, made the only hit charged against Swift. Rixey had the hit-and-run on with Durocher when he pulled Floyd Vaughn out of position. The rookie shortstop fielded the ball cleanly but he had to retrace his steps and Eppa Jeppa beat the play. Durocher went from first to third on the action. Leo scored a moment later on a muff by Suhr.

BRAME HIT HARD

The Reds hopped on Brame for three runs and three hits in the first and they added two more in the third. Four Pirate safeties, including a three-bagger by Suhr, gave the Pirates three in the third. Dave Barbee, batting for Swift in the eighth, drove in the other Pirate run. Two were out at the time.

Regis Leheny, Oakland left-hander, pitched to the Pittsburgh batters before the game. He had so much stuff on the ball that Manager Gibson talked business with him.

WALKER BEATS KING LEVINSKY

CHICAGO, April 30.—(AP.)—Mickey Walker, the grown up toy bulldog of the ring, today was a little farther along the road leading to a chance at the heavyweight championship of the world.

At 31, when most fighters are about washed up, and at a weight disadvantage of 23 pounds Walker last night got up from the canvas in the Chicago Stadium, and slugged his way to a 10-round decision victory over King Levinsky, the pride of Chicago's Ghetto.

Near the end of the first round a crushing overhand right caught the Jersey Irishman on the head, and as he staggered back a looping left hook knocked him flat on his back. He didn't even take a count, but bounced to his feet and back into battle.

Levinsky was not badly beaten, and the decision was not unanimous, but the prosperity-size crowd of 19,995 received the split verdict with clamorous approval. Referee Ed Purdy voted for Levinsky, and the two judges cast in favor of Walker. The gate was $73,892, of which after tax deductions, the fighters received 30 per cent apiece.

New Castle Eleven Wins Over Butler

NEW CASTLE, April 30.—The New Castle High School football team unpacked its gridiron paraphernalia from the moth balls long enough to engage Butler High in an off-season game here last night, with the local school emerging triumphant, 12 to 7. More than 2,000 fans attended.

Butler got off to an early lead in the first quarter when Mintz, quarterback, crossed the local goal line. Butler added the extra point on a pass.

New Castle scored a touchdown in each of the second and third quarters for its margin of victory.

WOMEN BREAK RELAY MARK

LOS ANGELES, April 30.—(AP.)—Miss Helene Madison returned to the role of record breaker in the Women's National Indoor A. A. U. championships yesterday by leading the Washington Athletic club 400-yard free style relay team to a new United States record.

The Seattle mermaid proved she was more than a match for Miss Josephine McKim, of the Los Angeles Athletic club, by winning the final lap of a race that went 4 minutes and 19 1-5 seconds.

This eclipsed by one-fifth second the old United States mark set in 1930 by the New York Swimming Association.

The first title defender to lose her crown in the meet was Miss Georgia Coleman, of the Los Angeles A. C., who met her first defeat in four years of competition in three-foot spring board diving.

Miss Coleman's teammate, Miss Dorothy Pynton, of the Los Angeles A. C., and youngest member of the 1928 American Olympic team, displayed better form to win the national crown with 124 points.

Berlinger Lauded By Gov. Pinchot

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, praised Barney Berlinger as an "inspiration to young America" in connection with the presentation last night of the James E. Sullivan Memorial award to the former Pennsylvania all-around star as the "outstanding American amateur athlete" of 1931.

WARE TO PLAY FOR CLEVELAND NEGRO NINE

By TOM BIRKS

Joe (Showboat) Ware, former Westinghouse High School star athlete, has signed a contract to play with Manager Young's Cleveland team in the East and West Negro League.

He will be in the lineup when the Clevelanders meet the Homestead Grays at Forbes Field next Saturday.

Showboat Ware

Ware, one of the greatest stars developed under Coach Burton at Westinghouse, played for the Westinghouse Alumni eleven in independent football circles last fall. It was then predicted that he would play with the team under Russell Prata in the Greater Pittsburgh League. Evidently Ware feels that he can make the grade in the fast Negro circuit, and his friends will watch him with interest.

CRAWFORDS PLAY TWO

This afternoon the Pittsburgh Crawfords and the New York Black Yankees meet in a double-header at Greenlee Field.

The Homestead Grays play at Alliance today and Manager Hank Daly takes his Homewood team to the City League to Latrobe to clash with the St. Vincent's College nine.

Practically all of the leading clubs in the district have carded practice sessions. The Edgewood club, Greater Pittsburgh champion, will meet the Marts-Griffin nine of the West Penn League. The Griffins expected to pitch Gigliotti in this game and it also is possible that he will draw the assignment from Manager Hank Daly at Latrobe City League rules do not allow him to play with any other club.

YANKEES VICTORS

The New York Black Yankees defeated the Crawfords at the new Greenlee Field last night at the dedication of the park. The score was 1 to 0. The teams battled for nine innings before the Yankees were able to send a hitter across the plate.

After a speech by Attorney Robert Vann and the flag-raising exercises the 6,000 fans stood bareheaded as the band struck up the national anthem.

Satchell Paige had the New Yorkers well in his hand until the ninth. Riggins singled to start the fireworks but was forced by Paige. Paige stole second and, on a bad throw by Perkins, continued to third. Thomas hit a short fly to right and Paige scored after the catch. Paige struck out 10 Yankees, while Hubbard fanned four.

Between Rounds

Following is the completed program for the wrestling show to be held at Motor Square Garden next Wednesday night by Promoters Charley Berosini and Ray Fabian. Ilmo Gallagher vs. Frank Speers (to a finish), and Max Dunkel vs. Eddie Mack (catch-as-catch-can, to a finish); Mike Mazurki vs. Steve Zikoff (catch-as-catch-can, to a finish); Abe Coleman vs. Sam Abery; Jim Kola-Kwariani vs. Anton Peterson, 30-minute bouts.

The local amateur champions who will compete in the National A. A. U. semi-championship tournament in Madison Square Garden, New York, next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night will leave Monday evening. Danny Ryan will act as coach and trainer, with John J. Taylor, secretary-treasurer of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., in the capacity of manager.

A.M.A. Title Events Carded at Erie

Two big Allegheny Mountain Association A. A. U. events are scheduled in Erie today, the annual Marathon race in the afternoon and a championship swimming meet in the evening.

Mike Kish, John Michlo, Alex Bodnar, John Quinn, Roxy De Marco, Frank Jerry, Frank Cerney, Alfred Snyder and Edward Antic are among the district runners who will compete over the 26-mile 385-yard course in the Marathon.

The swimming meet will be held at the Erie Y. M. C. A. in the evening. Pitt swimmers will compete, as will a team from Kennywood Park.

The A. M. A. senior 300 and 400-yard relay championships for men and junior 300-yard individual medley, 160 and 400-yard free style relays and 300-yard medley relay are scheduled.

Atcheson, Trulio In Handball Final

NEW YORK, April 30.—(AP.)—Sam Atcheson, of Memphis, Tenn., and Angelo Trulio, of the New York A. C., reached the final round of the National Senior Four-Wall Singles handball championships at the New York A. C. last night.

Atcheson, a favorite from the start, eliminated Al Hobelman, of Baltimore, 21-14, 21-3.

Trulio defeated John Dunwoody, of New York, 21-6, 21-2.

GRAYS VICTORS

YORK, Pa., April 30.—The Homestead Grays scored a 7 to 6 victory over the York team of the York-Pennsylvania League in an exhibition game here yesterday afternoon. Three Gray pitchers saw action and the Negro team was able to obtain only seven hits. The visitors capped out 14, with Allen, second baseman, leading the attack with three hits.

INDRISANO WINS

BOSTON, April 30.—(AP.)—Johnny Indrisano, Italian featherweight, decisioned Jack Burnell, of Worcester, in a ten-round bout here last night. Indrisano, who weighed 126½ pounds, received a unanimous decision over the former champion in the Boston Garden's 10-round feature. Burnell weighed 126½ pounds.

Two Japs Break Marathon Record

TOKIO, April 30.—(AP.)—Two Japanese distance runners competing in the Olympic tryouts today smashed the Olympic record for the marathon, each running the distance under the time of 2 hours 32 minutes 57 seconds set by El Ouafi, of France, in 1928.

Tanji Yahagi, who won, completed the 26 miles 385 yards in 2 hours 31 minutes 31 seconds, and Seiji Takahashi, who finished second, was timed in 2 hours 32 minutes 26 seconds.

BUTCH BOXES TALAMANTEZ TONIGHT

Mose Butch, of Oakland, and Frankie Talamantez, Mexican, of Cleveland, will box the main bout of a card of six-round bouts at the Kapphan Arena tonight, inaugurating Saturday night professional fighting in the Pittsburgh district, the first since the days of the old South Side Market House arena, more than a decade ago. The show is being put on at the popular price of $1 for all seats.

Butch won the draw for position on the card to get the main bout berth.

Billy Holt, of Homewood, boxes Frankie Bauer, of Cleveland, in the semi-final; Jackie Wilson, of Homewood, is in with Johnny Catalino, formerly of Charleston, W. Va.; Lee Sala, of Donora, meets Jimmy Taylor, of Cleveland; Tiger Joe West, local middleweight, engages Mickey Dugan, of Cleveland, and Young Saylor, of Charleroi, boxes Mike Cima, of Turtle Creek.

The show will go on at 9 o'clock, daylight saving time.

GENEVA DEFEATS DUKE NETTERS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Capt. Stewart Snodgrass and his tenacious Geneva net team copped its third shutout victory of the campaign by downing the Duquesne University racketsters on the Bluff yesterday. The Tri-setback for the Dukes made three bad ones in a row against the Red and Blue.

Snodgrass and his fierce Gold and White freshman confrere Eddie Clark, former district junior title contender, proved [illegible] a bit too steady for Frank Casey and Capt. Rege Bullion, top men of the Bluffites, the Covenanter stars registering over their respective opponents 6-1, 10-8 apiece.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says

WASHINGTON, April 30.—I said to Griff today:

"I feel young enough to go in and pitch myself."

Griff looked at me and said:

"If you were 24 hours older you'd be entitled to a pension."

I said:

"That ain't a bad idea. Greta Garbo is is retiring to Sweden. I'd like to retire to Montreal."

Griff said:

"If I put you on a pension you wouldn't retire at all. You'd stay up all night in a brewery."

I said:

"You're wrong. Give me a pension for life and I'll have it siphoned right into my bedroom."

Griff said:

"I was kidding. You've got 10 years left in you yet."

I said:

"Then I get a pension in 1942?"

Griff said:

"I'll do even better. In 1942, I'll have you reaching the peanut boys in base running."

I said:

"How come?"

Griff said:

"Teaching them how to stretch one bag into three."

BERRY TRADED TO CHISOX

BOSTON, April 30.—(AP.)—The Boston Red Sox management last night announced it had traded Charley Berry, first-string catcher to the Chicago White Sox for outfielders Johnny Watwood and Admad Joiler and Benny Tate, a catcher. In another deal with the White Sox, Jack Rothrock, Red Sox utility outfielder for the past five seasons, was sold for the $7,500 waiver price.

President Bob Quinn explained he was seeking additional hitting strength, which the Red Sox have needed for several seasons. Berry, although one of the most dependable receivers in the league, has been a streaky hitter.

U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM VICTOR

WASHINGTON, April 30.—(AP.)—Whether or not this is America's year to win back the Davis Cup the United States is off to a flying start.

A decisive victory over Canada in the first round of the American zone play was clinched with yesterday's doubles victory.

Little difficulty is expected in winning from Mexico at New Orleans two weeks hence. The Australians, whom the home forces expect to encounter in the American zone final at Philadelphia at the end of next month, are a different proposition.

Johnny Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison clinched the series with Canada by trouncing Dr. Jack Wright and Marcel Rainville 6-2, 6-1, 6-2. The victory coupled with the two singles matches won by the Americans the day before, gave them the necessary three out of five.

BENEFIT POLO TILT TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER

For sweet charity's sake, the cream of the district's talent, assisted by a number of Harvard University's varsity squad, will perform in the Hunt Armory tonight as a team of all-stars engages the Vangs, members of the local Indoor Polo League. The entire proceeds of the evening, including the receipts from the sale of programs, will go to the Family-Help-Family fund.

Riding for the All-Stars will be Bliss Flaccus, clever Shady Side Academy star, possible the second ranking poloist in this section; Lieuts. Watson and Peritt, of the One Hundred and Seventh Artillery outfit; Dave McCahill, another Shady Side ace, and Charles Kiser, former Artillery star.

The Vangs will line up with George Oliver, of Harvard, mounted at No. 1 in the stead of George Vang, sponsor of the team, who is on the sidelines with an injury suffered in practice. Howard Adams will be at No. 2, and Paul Maruzzan will be at No. 3. Col. James Crowden, W. C. Kline and George Davison will be held in reserve.

The contest will be refereed by Col. George Cherington and will get under way at 8:30 o'clock. The 107th Field Artillery Band will furnish entertainment before the contest and between chukkers.

Death of Murphy Is Commemorated

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 30.—Second anniversary services commemorating the death of Leo Murphy, who died April 30, 1930, as the result of injuries suffered in spring football practice at the University of Pittsburgh, were held at 8 o'clock this morning at St. Brendan's Church. The Rev. Charles McDonough sang the requiem mass.

Following the services friends of the former South High and Pitt halfback placed a wreath on Murphy's grave in Calvary Cemetery.

PENA AND PAUL SCORE WINS

DETROIT, April 30.—(AP.)—Johnny Pena, aggressive New Yorker, and Tommy Paul, of Buffalo, became finalists in the National Boxing Association featherweight elimination tournament by winning 10-round bouts here last night.

Pena won a surprise victory over Fidel La Barba, of Los Angeles, and Paul outpointed Frankie Wallace, Cleveland youngster.

While La Barba was the master at long range fighting, Pena was superior at close quarters. Pena did not take a backward step throughout the fight.

Paul had no trouble in taking the decision from Wallace. His ring generalship and flashy left jab was too much for his less experienced opponent.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Should a Girl Wed Because Suitor 'Needs' Her?

He moaned, and he groaned, and insisted he'd go plumb to the dogs if Connie didn't marry him—

And that it would be her fault!

So, although she didn't want to do it, Connie was beginning to wonder if maybe she hadn't better say "yes," because she couldn't bear the idea of putting the blight on his promising future, but before she said it she decided she'd ask for some advice.

We gave her an earful ourselves, and now here's Spud with plenty more.

"Don't let him take you in with that guff," sez he. "It's the bunk, and no mistake!"

And he should know what he's talking about. You'll agree with that when you hear his story.

"Dear Miss Martin—

LITTLE MANHOOD

"I've just read what you told Connie about her big, whining Romeo who threatened to throw up the 'sponge' and ruin his future (and blame the wreck on her) if she didn't marry him. And I want to say, speaking as a man, that you were right.

"Tell her not to worry about that lummox crying and throwing his life away because she doesn't love him, or agree to ante up the aisle with him, even if she doesn't. He won't.

"And right here I want to say that to my mind you'd have to look with a microscope to see any manhood in a bum who would put up a squawk like that, anyway. If he hasn't the gumption to be a man on his own hook, he certainly wouldn't be worth having as a husband.

"Every time she didn't agree with him about something, he'd start crying and putting on the big baby act again to get his own way, just as he is now. That's the way such bozos act.

"I guess I should know. My sister fell for a bleat like that. Her big hero swore that he would go out and hang himself if she didn't say 'yes,' so to 'save him' she married him.

WIFE LEFT HIM

"And did he make good? He did not. And how! Every time something went wrong at the office he's come home with a big alibi. Nobody appreciated him or treated him right. They were all 'down on him.' After having a good dose of him in the family we could all see that he was probably right about that. Anyone who had to have him around for long would be down on him, and the world was a tough place—to hear him tell it.

"After a while even Sis saw the light. She got so fed up finally that she came to the conclusion it wasn't up to her to wreck her life just to 'save him' any longer, so she up and left him, in spite of his moans about what he would do.

"And did he do it! Did he go out and quit his job, or hang himself?

"He did not! Her leaving him made him so mad that he went out to show her just what a prize she had lost—and he actually dug in and went to work. He woke up and made a man of himself.

"It's five years now since she walked out on him, and you never saw such a change in a human as there has been in him.

MENDED HIS WAYS

"At first he kept on making his threats, but when he found she wouldn't weaken and wouldn't come back till he showed her he was worth coming to, he did it. They're together again now, and he is doing fine.

"So I say to you, Connie, don't worry. If that bozo who is trying to whine you into marrying him when you don't want to is worth his salt, he'll dig in and be a man on his own.

"So don't think you're going to wreck him by saying 'No.' If he's that easily wrecked, he wouldn't be any good to you anyway, and if you did marry him, he'd still go on crabbing about that, and wreck both of you.

"So don't be foolish. You've got rights, as well as he.

"SPUD."

Good for you, Spud. You've got the right idea!

No man worth his salt is going to use his own weakness to club a woman into marrying him.

FISHERMEN—TWO

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Give me mine angle—; we'll to the river there!" she says, quoting Tony and Cleo from Will Shakespeare. "Every time of the year is fishing time for a pretty girl and her henchman Eros. Jack, the born fisherman, the wader of silver streams, may be able to go angling only in the months the law tells him he may, but not Glorioso and her pal. Any old time of the year and all times. And especially are they out for the cautious fishes in this—Leap Year—of all years.

Keen-eyed John gold-fish had better lurk in the darksome places. No matter now tempting the bait and the sunny surface where a lady's smile beams and her heart bobs on a hook!

Swift Jim trout, no gold about him, but speed and manly prowess aplenty, had better flash into his favorite hide-away, go into a monastery for a season of peace, or some such safe thing, for the angling lady is out after him.

Bill pike, silver Mac, Percy perch are due for the dry land of domesticity if they do not swim, fellows, swim.

For oh-so Glorioso has patience and wiles, and Cupid can sleep and wake and sleep again, and wake; for he has patience, too, the patience of the true fisherman and his love of the game!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The College Girl's Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When setting a table is the water glass placed to the right or left of the plate?

2. How should a young college girl have her cards printed? What size should the cards be? How should the names be printed? In what type.

GLADYS.

1. The water glass and all other glasses are placed at the right of the plate, above the knives. The water glass, goblet or tumbler, is placed just above the dinner knife, and if there is another glass, it is usually placed just below the water glass.

2. First, the cards should be engraved, not printed. It is better not to have any cards than to have them printed. And all cards should carry the title. In this case, Miss, even if the girl is young. The card should be about three inches long and about two inches wide.

The most charming and lovely style of engraving for the card is, to my taste, the shaded antique roman. This style is tall and graceful and seems to have a youthful quality that is especially appropriate for such a card.

Script, too, is a beautiful style, of course, always appropriate and very much less expensive than any other style of engraving.

Greeting Card

Dear M[illegible]n:

Last C[illegible]mas we received several Christmas cards, which were copies of etchings of English castles. Over each one there was a piece of tissue paper, on which was written the history of the picture. My friend maintains that it was wrong to keep the tissue on the picture or to send it with the picture. What do you think? J.

Since this information on the tissue was part of the unit, explaining about the subject of the etching, it seems inappropriate not to send the tissue with the etching-card. Usually I am thoroughly in favor of removing the tissue when one sends a card or an invitation or announcement, but in this case the reason-for-the-sending is so obvious that the tissue should not, I think, be removed.

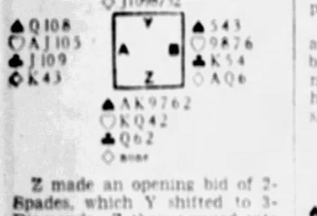
Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Unwise Doubles

Many players make "free doubles" (doubles of game bids) upon sporting chances to defeat contracts. Sometimes a redouble and fulfillment of the contract makes such doubles very expensive, as was the case on the hand shown here.



Z made an opening bid of 2-Spades, which Y shifted to 3-Diamonds. Z then jumped into 4-Spades; A doubled and Z redoubled. The whole proceeding was a bit crazy, but the hand was played well.

A led the J of clubs and his partner's K won the trick. B led back his fourth-best heart; Z split honors. A's Ace captured Z's Q. Of course A's 10 of Spades was bound to win a trick, if A killed dummy's J with a lead of the Q. This was done to prevent dummy from ruffing a heart. Z won the trick with his K, led his Ace of Spades and noting the fall of A's 8, led another spade, bumping together the two outstanding trumps, and leaving A in the lead, with two tricks to his credit.

A led back his J of hearts and Z's K won the trick. The scene was nicely set for the declaring side to win three club tricks, affording the declarer a discard of one losing heart. To go game, doubled and redoubled, all Z had to do was to trump a diamond, run off his two long trumps, and then give his opponents their third and last trick.

A's senseless double cost his side 200 points premium plus 360 points for added score below the line, or a total of 560 points.

In the majority of instances another bad double is one made before unusual support for partner's declaration. Note what happened on the hand next shown.

Z made a wild stab-in-the-dark sort of bid, when he opened with 5-Clubs. One hardly can blame A for taking his chance in bidding 5-Spades. Y thought his void hearts, his quick trick in diamonds and his three clubs justified his bid of 6-Clubs.

Instead of bidding 6-Spades for his partner, upon cards that would have given his side a grand slam lay down, B doubled the 6-Clubs. A dared bid no more. As a result Y-Z made a small slam, doubled, instead of losing a grand slam.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Painful 'Mucus Colitis' Is Due to Careless Living

Mucous colitis is an obstinate disease that has taxed modern medicine. It is a common ailment, and to many persons it is a serious matter, for it is difficult to cure.

Dr. Copeland

It is more frequently heard of among Americans than among citizens of other lands, and this may be due to the American manner of living. It is seldom seen where living conditions are simple and where food and eating are given the proper attention.

Mucous colitis is an inflammatory condition of the intestines. This inflammation, or irritation may be due to various causes. In this condition large quantities of mucous pass from the body. The disease is found in both children and adults, and is associated with digestive disturbances. Often it is caused by excessive gastric and intestinal secretions, found in nervous and hysterical persons.

The attacks may occur in paroxysms with colicky pain. In these attacks the pain is severe and may be confused with appendicitis.

Mucous colitis should never be neglected. Medical treatment directed by the family physician is imperative. Very often a person suffering from this condition becomes depressed and as a consequence his general health suffers.

Indiscretions in diet often produce an acute attack. Constipation is an important factor and must be corrected. Outdoor exercise, fresh air at night, plenty of rest, nourishing food and body hygiene are all important and considerations in the prevention and cure of this disease.

Often a change to a coarse diet is valuable and may eliminate the need of laxatives and enemas. Thorough cleansing of the large intestine is necessary in most cases. This may require a course of saline cathartics, but they should never be taken without the advice and supervision of a physician.

The liberal use of acidophilus milk and "cottage cheese" has been recommended by many authorities, but this diet should not be considered as a sure cure.

A good rule to remember is that only foods easily digested and agreeable to the patient should be given. In some afflicted persons fatty foods stimulate secretion and are recommended. In others these foods do harm, delay digestion, and cause pain and indigestion.

It is always best to serve something especially appetizing at the close of the meal. Please bear in mind that congenial company, appetizing foods and fluids aid in stimulating normal gastric secretion. This is important in the cure of mucous colitis. Do not become discouraged, as this disorder requires persistent and prolonged care.

Answers to Health Queries

T. H. Q.—What causes varicose veins?

A.—This is usually caused by increased tension in the veins, due to either constant external pressure, some obstruction of the deep veins, or, as in many cases to habitual over-exertion, such as long standing.

* * *

S. P. Q.—What causes cold sores in the mouth?

A.—This is probably due to acid in the system. Correct the diet and avoid poor elimination.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When there is muscular development of the chest, the bust is firm. Sagging breasts can be tightened and strengthened by deep breathing and all those exercises that pull hard on the muscles of the chest and upper arms. A brassiere should be worn.

Hollow cheeks fill out by means of massage and facial exercises. Spread thickly with a heavy cream, place fingers and thumbs outspread, pick up the large muscles of the cheeks with a clawing movement. To tone these fibers inhale a deep breath through the lips with cheeks drawn in and exhale with cheeks expanded. A silly-sounding performance, and one that leads to laughter, but effective nevertheless.

Still and yet the white satin evening gown retains its popularity. White satin shows up the defects of complexion as does no other fabric. When wearing it the blonde must not endeavor to make herself fairer by means of powder and factory blushes. No! She should ply a heavy creamy powder of fairly deep ivory tint, and she can indulge in the luxury of darker rouge. The brunette, when she dons her evening robe of snowy surface, must take to rose-colored powder, with rouge only a shade or two darker.

As a hygienic measure, as a means of relaxing nerves that are yowling and yelling, as a beautifier of the complexion that is suffering a winter slump, the daily bath with soap, warm water and friction with a bath brush rates precisely and exactly 100 per cent. The shower is the ideal means of getting clean, but that's not thorough unless there is a good sudsing and scouring before the deluge starts. The daily bather helps the skin in its work as an eliminating organ. Good results show up in brighter eye glints and a complexion that excites envy.

Insist on Child's Obedience

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Little Gordon, who will be 5 years old very soon, is notoriously a disobedient child, and, as with all children who fail to obey commands from the mother, there appears to be a sound reason. Gordon has been taught by his mother that he "doesn't have to," although she would indignantly deny it, for her purpose is to achieve just the opposite end.

But, for instance, the mother opens the front door, "Yoo-hoo's" to Gordon and says: "Come home, son. It's almost dinner time. Come home right away." Then she shuts the door and goes on with her preparation for the evening meal.

Gordon doesn't come until he gets a second call. Why? Because he knows that mother will call again; that many of mother's commands are perfunctory things; that she doesn't care much whether he obeys right this minute, and that he'll get another warning before the deadline has been reached.

What a pernicious thing that is to teach any child. It is a menace not only to his physical safety as in an emergency, but to his moral fibre as well.

A good rule for mothers in giving commands to children is to consider first. Is it necessary? So many commands are given when they could just as easily be withheld.

Second. Do I want the child to obey now, or any time within the next 10 minutes? If you want him to act now, give your command now; if 10 minutes from now will do, wait that 10 minutes. But insist upon immediate obedience.

Then, enforce your commands! They should be just and reasonable, to assure that you are right in making them, but once they are made, see that you get results! If your request or command is not important enough to warrant seeing it to a conclusion, don't make it!

Household Hints

Never wash chamois gloves in cold water as this hardens them.

Added to clear starch, a tiny piece of soap will give a fine gloss and prevent irons from sticking.

Green tomatoes can be made into a very good "fruit tart" if well sweetened after slicing up, sprinkled with ground ginger and lemon juice also a little finely grated lemon rind.

Remember when you buy new baking dishes to put them into cold water and bring this slowly to a boil, then leave the dishes, casseroles or other article in this until the water is cold. This will save many a cracked dish.

'Vivienne Ware' Courtroom Drama Begins; Roxy Heads WCAE Stars

For the first time in Pittsburgh's radio history, a complete murder trial is going on the air.

It is "The Trial of Vivienne Ware," and it starts tonight at 9 o'clock on WCAE. A thrilling radio drama, it has to do with a society girl charged with the killing of Damon Fenwicke, wealthy architect.

As is any other murder trial, that of Miss Ware will be "covered" by Sun Telegraph reporters, but the verdict—conviction or acquittal—will rest with the WCAE listeners through a poll of votes sent through the mails to the Sun-Telegraph.

The trial is in six episodes. The second to be presented on WCAE Monday night at 8:30.

Incidents on the life of George Washington as they occurred in New York 150 years ago are being reproduced on the radio today. Following the two early programs on KDKA commemorating Washington's farewell to his officers at Fraunce's Tavern still standing and the inauguration parade of April 30, 1789, WCAE at 4 o'clock brings the re-enactment of the scene when Washington became first President of the United States. Mayor James J. Walker and Dr. John H. Finley are the speaker, while New Yorkers, garbed in Colonial knee-breeches and wigs, take the roles of the personalities of 143 years ago.

Program Pointers

Roxy heads a gala array of radio talent in a special Radio City Program, broadcast, WCAE tonight, 7:30 to 11 p. m.

Amos 'n Andy send their part of the broadcast from Chicago and Gene and Glenn entertain from Cleveland, while New York contributes a veritable Who's Who of the Air, including Mme. Schumann-Heink, Sisters of the Skillet, the Serenaders, the Cavaliers, Fred Hufsmith, The Three Graces, Sylvia Froos, Borah Minnevitch and five former members of the famous Roxy's Gang, Gladys Rice, Carolyn Andrews, Elizabeth Lennox, Viola Philo and Betty Ayres. Eric Rapee directs the orchestra, Roxy serves as master of ceremonies and M. H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, tells of plans for Radio City, huge amusement center now under construction in Rockefeller Center.

Miss Ayres

The program is in the nature of a "bon voyage" to Roxy who sails next week for Europe on business connected with Radio City.

In order that WCAE might present the entire Roxy broadcast, the program of the Sun-Telegraph Nite Club, starting as usual at 11, runs for only a half hour instead of its customary hour tonight.

The effects of spring and pulchritude on the hearts of a handsome young unmarried announcer, John S. Young, and of a giant man, Jack Hightower, circus performer, 8 feet 6 inches tall, are heard by radio fans on KDKA at 8:30.

Clark's Pennsylvanians close their broadcasts from the Food Show at Motor Square Garden with a half-hour program on KQV at 8:30.

Janet Gaynor's life story is dramatized over WJAS at 8:30.

Prince George is heard during an international broadcast from London at 3:40 over WJAS.

A dramatization of the part played by Dr. Benjamin Rush, dean of American medicine in the yellow fever epidemic in Philadelphia during Colonial days is presented during the "Dance Fighters" program on KDKA at 8.

Rudolph Ganz, pianist, composer and conductor is guest artist on the Civic Concert at 8:15 on WCAE.

A special program is presented by the Pittsburgh Male Chorus under the direction of Lee Hess Barnes from WJAS at 9.

Celebrating his third anniversary as an official member of the staff at KDKA, Frederick G. Rodgers makes a guest appearance on the "Adventures With the Impossible" program tomorrow at 6:15 p. m.

Uncle Bob and Betty Read Sunday Comics At Noon Tomorrow

Because of an international broadcast on WCAE tomorrow at 12:30 p. m., Uncle Bob and Betty come to the microphone at noon, a half-hour earlier than their regular schedule, to read the Sun-Telegraph Sunday comics.

The unusual features of interest to all readers, published in the March of Events section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph and the American Weekly Magazine distributed every Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph, are discussed during the "American Weekly" broadcast on WCAE tonight at 7.

Four times daily, the latest news is flashed to WCAE listeners from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph, and Hearst Metrotone News. He is on the air at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

The Sun-Telegraph Nite Club is on the air for only half an hour tonight, beginning at 11, to permit WCAE fans to hear Roxy's Radio City program at 11:30. Artists featured on the Nite Club with David Levin's orchestra are Jean Clasky, soprano, and Paul Gannon, tenor. Herb McGee is master of ceremonies.

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY :-: :-: By ANTHONY ABBOT

Attorney Says Actor Was a Jealous Admirer of Lola Carewe

CHAPTER XXI.

In the bleak light that began to filter through Colt's studio we looked at each other in wonderment. Where were we going? The established fact that Guy Everett had lied, and about such an important matter, did seem significant. But Colt was not ready to discuss the case. Instead he thoughtfully consulted his watch, while he told me that Gavin had phoned the portrait of Basil was being cabled by tele-photo 3,000 miles to Paris.

It was now 5 o'clock in the morning of the new day.

"Ten o'clock in Paris," the chief reflected aloud. "Monsieur le Prefect must certainly be at his office."

And such is the service which the Bell Telephone Company puts at the disposal of all police officials that in five minutes Thatcher Colt and M. Dupont, Prefect of the Paris au Surete, were talking on the telephone with myself taking notes on an extension.

"Hello."

"Allo—"

"Monsieur Dupont."

"Mais oui. Qui est-ce?"

"Thatcher Colt."

"Ah Monsieur Colt mon cher ami! Comment allez-vous?"

"C'est la meme petite vie, Monsieur Dupont et vous?"

"Ah c'est la meme chose Monsieur Colt. Can I help you?"

Here the Paris police chief switched suddenly to English out of compliment to the Atlantic confrere and much to my relief.

PROMISES CO-OPERATION

"I am tracing the history of a woman—and a man," explained Colt. "First I want all the facts that you can get about the life in Paris or anywhere else of a woman now living here under the name of Lola Carewe also known as Rosita Jorga."

"Ah oui." And Mr. Dupont spelled out the names carefully.

"Will you also see if the Roumanian police have a photograph of a man supposed to be her lover—Jorga for a long time a political exile in London."

"I will do that too mon cher ami! Anything else?"

"Much more," chuckled Thatcher Colt, and went on to explain how the portrait of a young man, first name Basil, family name unknown, was being forwarded to the prefect by telephoto. M. Dupont gasped. Such impatient persons, these Americans!

"And what I am most earnestly hoping you will see your way clear to do," pursued Colt warmly, "is to have one of your agents call on one Marcel Grandon, 60 avenue D'Iena—in the Etoile district I assume—show him the telephoto portrait and try to get it identified. Perhaps your people may know him—it is barely possible the young man has a police record."

"We will do our best, Mr. Colt!"

"Angels could do no more, M. Dupont! A thousand thanks."

"Pas du tout, Monsieur Colt."

"Au revoir."

"Au revoir."

CALLS ROWLAND

As he hung up the receiver, Colt cast a rogue's grin at Dougherty.

"We're getting nearer to something," he said, "with our picture of Basil!"

"Smart as hell and all that—granted Dougherty, but I still don't see his connection with this case."

"We'll debate that presently," promised Colt. "Meanwhile, Tony, will you please now arouse Mr. Vincent Rowland from his innocent slumbers and tell him I would like to speak to him on the telephone?"

In this announcement Dougherty displayed a lively interest.

"I was much surprised, Thatcher," he revealed, "when you put a tail on Rowland. Surely you don't suspect that old chin-whisker of anything serious?"

Having relighted his pipe, Colt replied:

"I do regard the eminent Mr. Rowland with a somewhat jaundiced eye, Dougherty. Truth is, I was watching him in the Mayfair dining room last night, just before Lola sent us her note, inviting us into this singular business. He didn't wish Lola to write that note. I watched him trying to dissuade her. I don't know whether I ever told you or not, but in my youth I mastered lip-reading. I can listen to distant conversations by watching mouths. I saw him implore her to have nothing to do with me in this matter. Perhaps he feared having his name mixed up in a police case. Quite reasonably, too. Yet when we went over, he took the credit for inviting us."

"By George!" glowered Dougherty. "That is curious!"

"Mr. Rowland is on the telephone," I announced.

"Forgive me, Mr. Rowland," began Colt urbanely. "I am sorry to break into your sleep. But there are one or two points the police have to clear up. What's that? Oh, there is no doubt about it now—plain, unadulterated murder. Yes! Well it's very kind of you to be ready to help. I want to ask you two questions. Once, when you and I were talking in Miss Carewe's living room last night, you started to tell me something that sounded significant. You said, 'There is one curious circumstance which, maybe, I shouldn't tell—' Remember that? No, you didn't finish it. Miss Carewe interrupted us."

DENIES HAVING QUARRELED

At the other end of the wire Vincent Rowland was hemming nervously.

"I can't imagine what that was," he protested. "Let me think."

"I don't want to bring you downtown at this late hour," hinted Thatcher Colt. "But it is so important."

"I remember now—perfectly!" crowed Vincent Rowland. "I don't think it amounts to anything much at all. But for whatever it is worth, here it is. I have repeatedly warned Lola against her association with an actor named Guy Everett. In the first place, I don't think the fellow is altogether sane. In the second place, he was foolish enough to take Lola's advice on investments, and he lost his savings—every dollar he had in the world. In the third place, he wanted to marry her, and she didn't care a fig for him—not a fig. He was jealous of all her friends, including such a harmless one as myself. He blamed Christine Quires for turning Lola against him—he told me so. And he was especially jealous of Dr. Baldwin. I just thought that Guy Everett would bear watching—that's all."

"And you couldn't remember what it was you had meant to tell me," chided Colt sarcastically.

"I'm a sleepy and tired old man," fretted Rowland. "Now is there anything else, Mr. Colt?"

There was a moment of silence before Colt propounded the next question.

"Mr. Rowland—why did you and Lola quarrel before you left the apartment this evening?"

"Quarrel?"

The word was repeated like a squeal.

"Quarrel!" squeaked Vincent Rowland for a second time. "We did not quarrel. We had a few words, yes—anyone who stays around Lola Carewe very long will have words with her. She is—was—a high-tempered and tempestuous character. Mr. Colt. But we had no quarrel—we went out on a party together."

"Well, what did you have words about?"

"About Guy Everett—and who else? I told her she was a fool to be advising men in their investments. She has friends in some investment company downtown and sends them customers. I told her it was a dangerous game. I believe the federal government is going to send her friends to Atlanta—but I am sure Lola thinks I thought they are all right. And I warned her that Guy Everett was a ruined man and might try to strike back. And she told me to mind my own damned business—which I wish I had!"

"What is the name of the company to which she sends her wealthy friends for investment?"

"The Rock-Ribbed Securities Corporation."

"Thanks, Mr. Rowland. I will see you later in the day."

"Is that so?" groaned Vincent Rowland, as he hung up his receiver.

"That all sounds convincing enough," remarked Colt and Dougherty nodded sagely. He was about to continue when Colt reached for the telephone. This time it was to instruct Flynn about looking up the Rock-Ribbed Securities Corporation. This conversation finished, the chief sat back silently and lit his pipe.

I knew that the time had come to examine the evidence. But only a brief review was possible in Colt's present mood; there was too much yet to be learned.

"Get out your notebook, Tony," requested the chief, "and take down our discussion during the next five minutes."

"At last we are going to find out just where we are at," rejoiced Dougherty with an owlish stare of his blue eyes. The District Attorney set down an empty glass, ran a big hand through his red curls and cleared his enormous throat impressively.

"I am inclined to believe, Thatcher, that you are ignoring the obvious in this case—looking for subtleties that do not exist. It is all much simpler than you make out."

Colt smiled amiably and entreated the District Attorney to state his conclusions.

The time had come to examine the evidence.

Synopsis

Following the receipt of a death threat, Lola Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady," is mysteriously slain in her penthouse apartment at 3 a. m. New Year's. Dr. Hugh Baldwin reports death due to heart failure. The only clue to the murderer is a medical laboratory specimen box found outside Lola's window. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt attaches importance to the young man whose photograph is found in Lola's room, and whose identity Lola had refused to reveal beyond his first name, "Basil." At the mention of "Basil," Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, becomes hysterical. It is known that Lola quarreled with Guy Everett and Vincent Rowland, a lawyer, over investments. Eunice, the maid, confesses she was employed by Everett to report the goings on in the apartment. The mystery deepens with the finding of the body of Christine Quires, Lola's guest. Christine had been killed before Lola and her body hidden until an opportune moment arrived for the murderer to place it, soaking wet, in Lola's room. The findings are similar to those in Lola's case except that Christine's neck was bruised after death. Everett, Christine's last escort, claims he left her at the apartment elevator at midnight New Year's Eve, and then went for a ride on the Motor Parkway alone, arriving home after 3 a. m. Mrs. Carewe informs Colt that Christine lived with a brother, Edward, in Rochester, and was to receive her inheritance shortly. Colt orders Basil's picture telephotoed to the Paris police. Everett's alibi of the lone Motor Parkway drive is shattered.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Intends to Guard Marion at Brixton's Party

That there was a reference to Charles Owen in Mary's cryptic quotation from Kipling's Stalky stories I was very sure.

"The bleating of the goat attracts the tiger," she had quoted and though my recollection of the story in which it appeared was extremely hazy, I was sure that it referred to the planting of a decoy whereby an exceedingly brutal schoolboy had been given "the high justice, the middle and the low" by his mates.

Before Mary had gone with Marion to the Brixton house party, she had given me an unpleasant hour by telling me that Charles Owen, the rascally half-brother of Samuel Brixton, was paying flattering attention to Marion and plainly was trying to inveigle her into a marriage with him.

I had not dared to tell Lillian of this information so shocking and terrifying to all of us who loved her winsome young daughter, but I had talked the thing over with Marion's stepfather, Harry Underwood, who adored her in only slightly less degree than did her mother, and who, to my surprise, had also seen the assiduity with which Charles Owen was pursuing Marion.

Mary had revealed to us that Marion, like so many young girls, was distinctly flattered by the attention which this astute man of the world was showering upon her. But Mary believed that the very real attraction which Ronald had for Marion would successfully insulate her against Owen's scheme.

RUNNING NO RISK

This was the situation which raced rapidly through my mind as I conned Mary's quotation. "The tiger" could refer to no one else but Charles Owen. But what decoy had been arranged for him clever enough to induce him to give himself away?

"Do you get me?" There was an impatient note in Mary's voice and I knew that she was nervously anxious over my silence.

"I think I do, Mary. Are you sure you're not running any risks?"

"Not a pennyworth," she answered. "I, me, myself, am on the job every single second of the time, so you may rest assured that the high fences are being looked to, but oh, boy, am I on the track of something? If you take us home until we've put some more missing letters in the cross-word puzzle, it will be the crime of the century."

"You're sure, absolutely, that you are running no risk?" I asked again.

"Couldn't be surer if I were the whole insurance company," she said. "What do you think of the whole thing anyway? Do you think you can wangle Mrs. Underwood into letting us stay up here?"

TELLS ABOUT REVISION

"It's Mr. Underwood who will decide," I told her. "Marion's mother is lying down with a headache and cannot be disturbed. I told this to Mrs. Brixton when she asked about your staying and also told her that I would try to get Mr. Underwood to consent to the journey."

"I knew you'd be pulling stroke-oar," she said with admiring affection in her voice. "Well, here's hoping! How is everybody at the farmhouse?"

"Very well, indeed, thank you." I said perfunctorily, and purposely ignoring the affair of the wounded Chinese. Then I threw her a sop to keep her active mind from inquiry.

"I finished the final revision of my last act this morning. It will be typed by tomorrow, and then it will be all ready for Mr. Veritzen's inspection."

"How perfectly spiffy!" Mary exclaimed joyously, then her voice changed. "But I don't wish you any joy of that inspection process. 'Me,' as Katie so eloquently spiels, 'I'd rather take a thrashing any day than listen to a discourse from Pondrous Phil upon his favorite topic 'What I Know About the Drammer.'"

"Haven't you any reverence for your future father-in-law?" I asked her, laughing.

"He'll never be my father-in-law—that is alive," she retorted. "We'd be sure to murder each other upon the wedding day. I don't see just how things are going to be managed, for, as you know, Noel and I staged a great reconciliation stunt the night before I left, but I'm telling you, that old crocodile and I are sure poison to each other. Oh, by the way, tell me, has Attless Avis been in the picture lately?"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Boys and girls meet Jack Goldstein, just elected grand jester of the Manor Theater of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club.

Jack is 13 and lives at 2265 Tilbury street. He is a student at the Taylor Allderdice High School and is in Grade 8-A.

His hobby besides the Junior Komic Club is airplanes, he has built several model planes and every chance he gets you'll find him talking airplanes and Junior Komic Club.

Speaking of the Junior Komic Club, Jack said:

"I think that the club is a great idea. I was one of the first to join when it was organized last year, and I've never missed a meeting. Now that the other members have elected me their Grand Jester, I am going to try and get for the Manor chapter the honor of enrolling the most new members in the next four weeks. Every meeting there is something different for the boys and girls and they are always sure of lots of fun."

Today at the Enright chapter Miss Ruthie Miller who conducts the dancing school and Frank Roberts, manager of the Enright, picked from among the pupils of Miss Miller's dancing class 16 girls who will be in the chorus of Manager Roberts' Junior Komic Club show which will be presented for the first time in about four weeks.

All of the members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club have heard "Uncle Bob and Betty," those two lovable characters that read for you and all the other children—big and little—the Sun-Telegraph comics every Tuesday and Thursday at 6 p. m. from radio station WCAE.

UNCLE BOB AND BETTY

They also read you the comic section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph from the same station usually at 12:30 noon. But, children here's some very important news about "Uncle Bob and Betty." For tomorrow only they will read you the Sunday comic section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph at 12 o'clock noon. Remember this change of time is for tomorrow only. Be sure and tell all your little friends and mother and dad so that they can have the radio all set for you at noon tomorrow, because you won't want to miss these two great characters who are honorary members of your club.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

Congratulations to the following boys and girls, all members of the Junior Komic Club, who are celebrating their birthday today.

I am not like my wife's people, who would rather find a comfortable chair and slander innocent parties than do a hard day's work. Some people never know how fortunate they are to have a daughter legally married to presidential timber. As for my personal conduct in China—I will let the people decide that at the polls. I have been asked to explain the above picture, brought back from China. It shows the uniform adopted by the girlies in Shanghai at my suggestion. Stadtfeld's Victory

One of the Most Encouraging Results of the Election—Brief Comment on Local News.

The election of Judge Joseph Stadtfeld as one of the Republican nominees for the Superior Court is among the most encouraging results of the primary. It assures the re-tention on the bench of one of our most able and upright jurists, and, what is even more important, serves notice on the Republican machine dominated by William Vare that the people will not permit it to control the judiciary.

*The Vare machine's attempt to unseat Judge Stadt-*feld was resented throughout the state. It was to be expected that Stadtfeld would make a fine showing in Allegheny County, his home; but he ran ahead of two of the machine's three candidates in Washington County, home of State Chairman Edward Martin, who had indorsed the Vare slate, and was first or second in many other counties.

Particularly gratifying is the strength shown by Judge Stadtfeld in the eastern counties, where the Vare machine might have been expected to exercise most power. Stadtfeld was second in Lackawanna, where the machine won every other contest; he was first in Lancaster, also carried by the state organization, and defeated one of the organization's candidates in Montgomery County.

The capture of Republican nominations by many candidates for the Legislature pledged to support legislation for the more effective regulation of the public utilities offers hope that utilities charging unfair rates will be forced to lower them. Far-seeing utility companies, reading the handwriting on the wall, will reduce exorbitant rates voluntarily.

*Significant, in this connection, is an address de-*livered by Philip H. Gadsden, vice president of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, before the Missouri Association of Public Utilities Thursday. He declared the public was losing confidence in public service commissions and that unless their regulatory powers were strengthened the utilities would be municipally owned and operated.

The Duquesne Light Company and the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company might well take as their guiding principle in rate-making the policy advocated by Gadsden in his speech to the Missouri utilities executives: Do not charge "all the traffic will bear," but find out how low rates can be reduced to induce the largest possible use of the service.

The Naturalists' Club gave a dinner at the Duquesne Club last evening in honor of Thomas Liggett's seventy-fifth birthday. Liggett is a citizen whom the whole community might well honor, for his public services have been many and notable. He led the successful movement for the purchase of the Cook Forest as a state park, and has fought vigorously for the preservation of the purity of our streams.

*The trial of the so-called "honor slayers" at Hono-*lulu has furnished some of the most interesting news of the past week. Murder trials have much of the thrill that is to be found in exciting drama. The proceedings in "The Trial of Vivienne Ware" will be broadcast from Station WCAE, beginning at 9 o'clock tonight. You can follow the case in the Sun-Telegraph.

The portrait of a famous radio speaker, the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, of the Shrine of the Little Flower, Royal Oak, Mich., will be reproduced tomorrow in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The reproduction is suitable for framing. A page of pictures of interesting babies and scores of other photographs will also be found in the section.

What kind of eyebrows do you have? The first classification ever made reveals five standard types, some distinctly masculine, others feminine. They are described and pictured in an absorbing article in the American Weekly, which will be distributed as a supplement to the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The frontispiece of the magazine is a reproduction in full colors of a beautiful painting.

A Significant Answer

Victory of Senator Davis Helps to Confirm State of Opinion Concerning Prohibition.

Out of a total of 4,668,537 votes received and tabulated by the Literary Digest, in its poll on prohibition, the percentage for repeal is 73.51 and for continuance of prohibition, 26.49 per cent.

The poll is now concluded, with the tenth weekly tabulation of returns.

The heavy preponderance of sentiment for repeal has been maintained, with only fractional variations from week to week, since the first reports were received.

But more significant than this poll is the result of this week's Republican primary in Pennsylvania on the nomination of a United States Senator.

The present Senator, James J. Davis, who was seeking renomination, ran as a wet. He was opposed by Gen. Smedley D. Butler, described as a "BONE DRY Pinchot product." The issue was sharply and distinctly drawn.

DRY LEADERS DECLARED THAT THIS CONTEST WOULD BE A "CRUCIAL FIGHT FOR PROHIBITION."

According to returns, which are substantially complete, Davis polled 883,211 votes against Butler's 496,761. The plurality of 386,450 for the wet candidate, exceeded all predictions and stunned the drys.

Here is the answer to those who seek to discredit the various polls, which have uniformly shown an overwhelming preponderance of wet sentiment throughout the country, as not reflecting the true state of public opinion.

The Republican Party is the cherished hope, somewhat diminished to be sure, but still the mainstay and reliance of the drys.

And yet, in the state which has been the citadel of Republican voting strength, A DRY CANDIDATE FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE, BACKED BY THE REPUBLICAN GOVERNOR OF THE STATE, HAS LITERALLY BEEN SNOWED UNDER.

The signs multiply and grow plainer.

Relief from the baleful clutch of prohibition comes nearer with every chance the people receive to express their judgment on this issue.

Marooned!

Twenty-six European nations and political subdivisions have, at various times since 1914, dipped deeply into the purses of the private investors of America.

The American pocketbooks were always wide open because the international bankers, WHO GOT THEIRS COMING AND GOING, solemnly advised that such "INVESTMENTS were SOUND and SAFE."

And the State Department and the Commerce Department at Washington were not averse to furthering the cause of the foreign borrowers.

And what a colossal price the American public paid for the ride they took at the invitation of the international bankers!

The total of European securities publicly offered here between 1914 and 1930 was $6,708,000,000. There are still outstanding TWENTY-FOUR HUNDRED MILLIONS of these securities held by private investors here.

The current market value for these "safe, sound investments" is SIXTEEN HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS.

The public, to date, has paid SEVEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-TWO MILLION DOLLARS for the ride.

Look again at the Enright picture-editorial above. Please note the flag on the ship scudding away. Take a second good look at the investor.

For this we have international bankers!

While Stimson Fools With Fire at Geneva We Play Ostrich Here

By BRIG. GEN. HENRY J. REILLY, O. R. C.

THE debate in the House on the Navy appropriation bill, coupled with dispatches from Europe, shows we are playing the ostrich in Washington while fooling with fire at Geneva.

We are playing the ostrich in Washington because we are using the so-called "disarmament" conference at Geneva as an EXCUSE for failure to make adequate appropriations for our Navy.

We are fooling with fire at Geneva because the so-called "disarmament" conference is NOT working towards peace through disarmament, but IS working towards the coalescence of Europe into two hostile groups similar to the coalescence which brought on the great war of 1914-1918.

We are fooling with fire at Geneva because we are mixing in the League of Nations-Japanese dispute over conditions in Shanghai and Manchuria.

This dispute is tending towards a worldwide coalescence of powers into two groups, one around Japan, the other around Russia.

THE erroneous and therefore dangerous idea that the conference is working towards disarmament, with the consequence that it is safe for us to keep our Army and Navy in their present INADEQUATE state, is typically expressed in these words of Representative Burton L. French, of Idaho, in the debate on the Navy bill.

"There is no world condition that in my judgment threatens the United States in such manner as to justify such a course (building the Navy to treaty strength).

"There is at this time being held a conference in Geneva which is representative of all the great powers, and looking to the reduction of the military and naval burdens of the world. Any program upon the part of the United States looking to the expansion of our naval or military would be disturbing to the conference."

WHAT are the facts?

The records of the conference show plainly—as have all the records of all the arms conferences, beginning with the Washington one of 1921-22—that NO NATION HAS ACCEPTED THE IDEA THAT DISARMAMENT IS THE ROAD TO PEACE.

They show instead that every nation, EXCEPT OURS, has again and again openly enunciated that national security can only be obtained by adequate armament.

What happened, and is happening, to disarmed China shows this to be a common sense point of view.

The records show that the armament which each nation insists is necessary for its security depends upon the international political situation and that the security any nation can have depends upon which other nations will join it and which ones will join its possible enemy in time of war.

In the decade prior to 1914 this same maneuvering led to the steady coalescence of the continental nations into two groups; one clustering around France; the other around Germany.

Britain, from her formerly isolated position across the Channel and North Sea, in attempting to exercise "the balance of power" between these two groups, became entangled, with the result that she entered the World War.

TODAY, there are two groups approaching coalescence.

One has to do with Europe and is gradually dividing the nations into those which intend to maintain the Treaty of Versailles, and those which intend to change, if not to wreck it.

A larger coalescence, because it is worldwide, is beginning to take place, with the Orient as the center of controversy.

Both Russia and Japan, the principal leaders of the opposite groups, at the present time, through past experience, know very well how to trade in to the European quarrel over the Treaty of Versailles as a means of increasing their own strength.

Our proposals to date, coupled with the reports of Mr. Stimson's activities since he arrived in Europe, indicate more and more plainly that we are attempting to play in these two dangerous questions the "same balance of power" international politics which inevitably led Britain into the great war of 1914-1918.

To avoid being brutally awakened from our dream of peace through disarmament, to find ourselves involved in another world war, we must do two things:

First, stop our activities at Geneva.

Second, insist that Congress recognize that our Army and Navy are today dangerously below the minimum essential to keep us out of war and that both be brought up to that minimum NOW.

The Sweet and Lowdown

Conceit is a man's delusion that the world thinks as much of him as he thinks of himself. Vanity is a woman's delusion that she can make the world think MORE of her than she thinks of herself.

* * *

Just so long as love is a necessity to a woman and a mere luxury to a man, men can keep women jumping through hoops and begging for sugar. A strong mind will never give a woman "power" over man, as long as she has a weak heart.

A woman resorts to strategy when she wants her way, a man only resorts to strategy when he wants her OUT of the way.

* * *

A woman can always tell you just how to keep a man trotting along in the straight and narrow path—until she marries one and tries her hand at it.

* * *

Women will never cease to be a mystery to man, so long as five or six of them can talk all at once without losing their continuity or wrecking each other's train of thought.

* * *

When a girl begins to scold you for taking her to expensive places and insists on leading you to a cheap table d'hote—that's love. Dodge, quickly—or listen for the wedding bells.

"The most curious thing in the world," says the Cynical Misogygist, "is a woman who is not curious." And perhaps the most unusual thing in the world is a man who doesn't believe that he's "unusual."

* * *

The girl who reaches the altar first, is the one who knows how to appear just dumb and innocuous enough to make a man think that she is "safe" to play around with and would never have the skill to land him.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 30.—Here I am taped off waiting for a movie seat. Outside a leather lung ballyhooed: "Plenty of seats inside!" But he forgot to mention they were filled. There! Everybody moves another step. And the bird in back takes up breathing down my neck where he left off.

My wife bears up well. A trifle pale, but carrying on. I'll smile. She asks at what I'm grinning? Peeved. I suppose it is my fault we are here. After dinner she said: "Let's go to the movies." So here we are. And now she is trying to give me the finger.

Maybe I can do something with this usher. Listen, Gen. Pershing, how about slipping us ahead of the crowd into a couple of seats. Against the rules. All right take off that Royal Grenadier uniform and we'll trade punches. He pretends not to hear. Lucky for him.

Two steps. This is the life. Some people like wild women, others play the ponies or sniff cocaine. But this is my racket—standing on one foot and then the other. And there's no time for standing on one foot then the other like the cool of the evening.

If I could get into my inside pocket to my pencil I'd like to make a note to get flea powder for the dogs. That poor worm squirming ahead gives me the idea. This wouldn't be a bad spot to give a mustache a twirl. Remind me to raise a mustache for Autumn. One that suggests a mashed gnat.

This is not bad. We are right in front of a full-length mirror. A certain way I turn my head in a dim light you'd swear it was Conrad Nagle. Catch this full view! Brings out the savage in me. Aha! Proud beauty! Business of gnashing my teeth. Have it your way—gnashing my tooth then. Precisionist!

I believe I'll part my hair in the middle again. And bust out in a choke collar. I'm being heckled. Those two dames giggle at my peeks in the mirror. I'll act haughty. Fawney! Mingling this way with the commoners. But I love to rub elbows with the proletariat.

* * *

Fun to see how the other half lives. Hotsy, totsy! Ain't I the one? We have passed the mirror anyway. Wonder what the film is. I forgot to look. I hope there's a Mickey Mouse. You'd die at my imitation of him. One thing you can bet on—there'll be a battleship launching in the news shots. With a close up of the Governor's daughter.

* * *

Where in the world is my frau? (German). There she is. I forgot we are not speaking. She looks bored as a circus lion. I'll pretend I'm slack of breath when that usher comes by again. Nay. General, no seat for me! I'm all right. I only wanted to be seated when it's my turn. No favors. I'm not a whit better than the others. Why, the bum isn't even looking. You and your gold rope! Well, my uncle Alex had a Pythian hat with six white plumes. How do you like those berries?

* * *

Now they are letting them dribble down the aisles. Three more dribbles and away we go. For the—I've seen this film before! I remember that original opening scene where the butler is patting sofa pillows in the drawing room and the phone rings. My wife has seen it, too. Will I get it! If she says one word to me I'll pout. I haven't put on a full blown pout since I don't know when. It might be a good idea to get real mad. You know, bluster around and scare people.

* * *

See here, usher (business of clapping hands quickly three times) where's the manager? I don't suppose you have one. This dump runs itself. Well, Will Hays and I are pals and he'll hear of this. A movie? We used to give better magic lantern shows in Aleshire's Hall. Who's making a disturbance? I'm an American citizen and have my rights so I have and everything.

* * *

Take your dirty hand off my collar. Come out on the sidewalk. So you're the manager are you? Well, I was there with my wife minding my business and six of your ushers slipped up behind me and began slugging me with window poles and calling me foul names.

* * *

Don't worry, I'm going out, but you don't have to shove me around that way. I stand in with every newspaper in town and this will look sweet smeared all over the front pages. (At that I didn't fare so badly—coming in on passes and getting money back to boot.)

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Here is a rare book—"LIVES," by Gustav Eckstein. It is like a door, opening.

Do you sometimes grow tired of your life; tired of thinking the same thoughts; doing the same things? Do you wish you could open a door and go away from yourself for a little while; go, perhaps, into other lives and feel what they feel?

You can, if you will. Gustav Eckstein did—then wrote this book about it.

Gustav Eckstein is a doctor. That is an interesting career, but even the most interesting work palls. And then, besides, there are sorrow and anxiety—things one wishes to escape. It would be pleasant, perhaps exciting, to slip away from doctoring and all one's familiar, personal experiences, into other existences.

And so he did!

He went out into lives you and I have never known. He went into them so deeply that, for a time, he was almost a part of them. He shared their most secret moods, their fear and delight, their hate and love, and the mystery of their life and death.

He stopped being Gustav Eckstein. And he became, whenever he so willed it—

Two white rats!
A couple of parrots!
Three turtles!
Seven cats!
And a million cockroaches!
You stare. You sniff. You think this is a joke.

"Even if it's true, which it probably isn't," you say, "what on earth could he find in common creatures like that?"

Other people, listening to Gustav Eckstein tell about his adventures, said the same thing. But when you have read his book you will not say it any more, and the chances are that you will never again call even a cockroach "a common creature."

For each of these small living things was an individual. It was as much an individual as a man is an individual. It had its own pattern of life, its own likes and dislikes, its own schemes and successes and failures.

The little mother mouse endlessly racing, endlessly accumulating, flirting an impudent, feminine tail at established law, making a home for her 13 babies in the desk drawer—as you read, she is no longer just a mother mouse. She is a tiny spirit who loves, and laughs, and grieves, and nibbles a friendly finger in her loneliness.

The little green parrot who never wanted to go to bed; who went with Gustav Eckstein to his concerts, tucked warmly under his coat, talking softly to him, sometimes, during the concert.

Even "Monsieur et Madame" living their orderly, waddling lives within their neat, black turtle shells.

They are all individuals, and they are all part of the eternal mystery. Watching them, living with them, serving them, a tired man found romance, adventure and delicate magic—and escape from himself. And he found something else.

By entering their lives, he increased his own life. He became more than one tired, bored person with one limited number of individuals, with an infinite variety of problems and experiences.

You are tired of your life, you say? You wish you could travel?

But even if you have traveled you would still be living your own life, taking yourself with you. There is no relief or release in that.

But if you will open the door of your curiosity and imagination and go into other lives, even into the life of the commonest animal or simplest plant, then you may expand your life into endless adventures and mysteries.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Richest House

This little house is very bare
And very poor and old,
Its tenants live on meager fare
And suffer cold.

Sometimes a passer feels concern
For those who dwell inside,
And wonders if they do not yearn
For wealth denied.

Oh, eyes that stare and do not see,
Oh, heart that holds no dreams,
Yours is the house of poverty
And where no joy gleams!

This little house is very cheap
And very dim and small;
Yet here peace lulls to happy sleep
And faith cheers all.

And here dwell love and song and mirth
And every kindly grace;
Perhaps the richest house on earth
Is this poor place!
